LINDY DEALS WITH KIDNAPERS; NOTE 'REVEALS' HIDING PLACE

Today

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THIS IS THE description of the Lindbergh child:

"Twenty months old, blue eyes, curly golden hair, fair complexion, a chubby boy, resembling his father. He is about normal size for a child of his age, has just begun to toddle and is learning to talk."

Every word of that description must strike deep into the heart of the child's mother.

WHOEVER THEY are that stole the Lindbergh child, they must know that their only hope of safety, here or hereafter, lies in returning the child promptly to its mother's arms.

The kidnapers can have the money that they demand. They can rely absolutely on any promises that Col. Lindbergh may make in connection with paying the money, and the return of the child.

Until this problem is solved and the little boy is safe again with his father and mother, it is untimely to talk of "most severe punishment" for the crime of kidnaping, or of anything but this child's safety.

WHEN GREAT BRITAIN had "free trade" and this country was living inside of tariff walls, tariff seemed wicked to the British.

Now they have tried protection, and it seems to agree with them. They will repay tomorrow one hundred and fifty millions of the two hundred million dollars borrowed from this country last August, to bolster the falling pound. Evidently confident that the pound is all right, Britain has lifted the ban on exchange purchases and gives her stock exchange full swing again.

Theoretically, it seems barbarous for the world's different nations to live inside a tariff wall, each shutting out his neighbor. But practically, if you have money to spend, it is a good thing to spend it with members of your own family first; your own nation, second.

THE NEW CRY in England, "Buy British" is yielding results.

If Lord Beaverbrook can carry through his plan of free trade inside of the empire, all of its units trading with each other without restrictions, as our forty-eight states trade with each other, no custom houses between, there will be a new British boom.

NEW YORK State acts unwisely in taxing, at this time, moving pictures, and other amusements of the people. Such a tax has never been laid and should not be laid, except in times of extreme prosperity, if at all.

It is difficult enough, under existing circumstances, to keep the crowd in a cheerful mood, discouraging active dissatisfaction, without laying an odious tax on the people's harmless amusement.

IT IS A SAD comment on New York State's government that it cannot tax or suppress the tens of thousands of speakeasies that exist in New York City alone, taking in hundreds of millions from the public's pocketbook, and must get its income by taxing an industry already in greatest difficulties.

If the government could get for itself a reasonable share of the gigantic sum that its public officials, directly and indirectly, get from bootleggers and other criminals, it would not need to tax the people's pleasures.

GOV. ROOSEVELT and Lieut. Gov. Lehman, if they put through this tax, will find that they have made a political mistake.

If the tax is enforced each theater should put at its entrance a tin box, into which the public would be required to drop the amount of the tax, the box appropriately inscribed with the names of the politicians responsible.

SOME MAY BE hoarding, but Uncle Sam is NOT. In fact, he is going a "teeny; weeny" bit beyond his means.

In the last eight months he took in one billion three hundred and thirty-four million and some odd hundreds of thousands of dollars and spent three billions one hundred and fifteen millions and some odd thousands. In other words, he spent exactly one billion seven hundred and eighty-one million, seventeen thousand four hundred and ninety-six dollars more than he took in.

THIS INTERESTS YOU, because you will be taxed to make up the difference. Uncle Sam has no choice. To live at the rate of almost two hundred and twenty million dollars a month, more than seven million dollars a day beyond your income, means optimism.

IN THE DAYS of Grover Cleveland the total expense of the United States government per year was less than one-third the present deficit for eight months.

WAR IS EXPENSIVE. Shoveling out your money to other countries is also expensive.

And prohibition is expensive, depriving the country, according to Prof. Seligman, of fifteen hundred million dollars a year income.

CHINA, JAPAN SUSPEND FIGHTING

Tokio and Nanking Order Hostilities to Cease; Conference Prepared

BULLETIN.

TOKIO, March 3.—(INS.)—A threat to assassinate United States Ambassador William Cameron Forbes and blow up the United States embassy here is being investigated by police, International News Service learned tonight.

SHANGHAI (Friday), March 4. — (AP.) — The Chinese government at Nanking notified the League of Nations assembly today that the 19th Route Army had been instructed to cease hostilities in this area unless it were attacked.

This move came soon after the Japanese military and naval commanders announced their forces would discontinue the fighting unless the Chinese launched an attack.

The government's definite move, it was believed, was designed to make possible the opening of preliminary negotiations to restore peace.

The Chinese representative at Geneva was notified of this development, presumably while the League of Nations assembly was still in session.

SPORADIC FIRING

At 1 o'clock this morning, despite the Chinese report of fighting at Liuho, the silence of an undeclared armistice had settled upon the battle front.

The Japanese were establishing a permanent line of defense, and only an occasional rifle shot cracked along the 25 miles be-

DUQUESNE VOTE VERDICT SCORED

Chief of Police Thomas J. Flynn, of Duquesne, five of his patrolmen and a civilian were acquitted of election law violations by a sealed verdict that drew fire of Visiting Judge James A. Chambers in Criminal Court today.

Judge Chambers set aside that portion of the verdict placing costs, except in one instance, on the original prosecutors, Albert A. Saltzer, Nick Dublac and Albert Dopcus. The county will have to pay.

Judge Chambers declared:

"The verdict should have been guilty in all cases. The placing of costs on the original prosecutors would only tend to deter people from making legitimate prosecutions. All of these defendants should have been found guilty.

The court granted a motion of Assistant District Attorney B. Meredith Reid to set aside the costs in all cases except one in which they were placed on the county.

Those free, besides Flynn were Policemen Timothy Long, William Malloy, George Wallington, Henry Jones and Murtiford Shaughnessy and Nick Spanovich, a civilian.

The seven defendants were charged with violations of the election laws at the last September primaries.

POLICE RUSH TO FIND BABY

Letter Mailed in Boston by Woman Gives Address And Urges Quick Rescue

BULLETIN.

TRENTON, N. J., March 3.—(INS.)—Working on information contained in a letter sent from Boston by a woman claiming she knew the location of kidnaped Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., state troopers were rushed to Princeton, N. J.

International News Service.

BOSTON, March 3.—"Your son is held by two men and a woman at 163—"

Thus read an airmail letter to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh posted in the South End today by a nervous little old woman in black with a slight German accent.

The address was said to be either Princeton, Provincetown or Providence.

URGES QUICK ACTION

The letter urged Col. Lindbergh to "act at once."

At police headquarters, where the letter was opened by police and postal inspecters, the missive was carefully guarded. However,

Volpe Freed, But Told to Post Bond

Louis Volpe, former Wilmerding political leader, was ordered placed under $500 bond to observe the peace by visiting Judge James A. McLaughry today after he had heard testimony in surety of the peace charges brought by three Wilmerding residents as the outcome of election trouble.

The charges were made by Milos Milasinovich, Wilmerding barber, his wife and by Theodore Uzelec, grocer, who testified the day after the primaries Volpe had threatened to damage their property and get them because they had voted "wrong." Volpe made no defense.

Volpe was acquitted by a directed verdict of the court on a malicious mischief charge preferred by Milasinovich, who averred that someone threw a brick through his shop window the day after the November election. There were no eye witnesses to the incident. The jury divided the costs between Volpe and Milasinovich.

NEW YORK, March 3.

(International News Service).

A new and complete description of the kidnaped Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was given out today.

These are the distinguishing characteristics of the baby:

He has a pronounced dimple in his chin.

He is teething.

When he hears a telephone, he attempts to take down the receiver and talk into it.

He has begun to toddle.

His talk consists mainly of such words as "wanna get down," "big bow-wow," and simple nursery words.

He dislikes strangers, whimpers if they fondle him and draws himself away from them.

He has blue eyes like his father.

His hair is light and curly.

He is 20 months old, 2 feet 9 inches tall and weighs 30 pounds. When stolen from his crib, he wore a white balbriggan one-piece sleeping suit, size two, with long sleeves and stitched feet, six pearl buttons down the front and three across the hips at the back.

Baby's Dog Comforts Lindy

(Copyright, 1932, by Associated Press.)

At his heels scrambled the little short-legged white dog which sleeps outside the door of the baby's nursery.

Seen plowing through dense undergrowth, a mile from the house, they were a pair to arouse sympathy in the hardest heart, the man's face drawn and white, the little dog dashing to one side and then the other as though hunting for its lost playmate.

The colonel was completely oblivious to all around him, his inner turmoil apparently blinding him to everything.

After about an hour he returned to the house, the little dog still following.

CHILD'S RETURN SEEN WITHIN FEW HOURS; ROADS KEPT OPEN

By DAVID P. SENTNER

International News Service.

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 3.—The winding path to the Lindbergh house on a hill was all clear this afternoon for the hoped-for homecoming of tiny Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.

Developments tumbled over each other, some of them impossible to substantiate "officially."

The main ones were:

1. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the kidnaped baby, was quoted definitely by a state trooper on the estate as declaring negotiations were under way with the kidnapers and return of the child was expected shortly.

2. An air mail letter seized by postal authorities in Boston claimed to furnish the place where the kidnaped baby was being kept. Mailed by a little old woman, the letter gave a location "close to New Jersey." Authorities sped to the spot mentioned.

3. Gov. A. Harry Moore, accompanied by Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the state police, had a luncheon conference with the Lindberghs at their home.

4. The "no man's zone" around the Lindbergh estate was widened.

READY TO MEET ANY TERMS

Despite the fact that the Lindbergh baby crib was still empty at noon—the time when Col. Lindbergh and his wife hoped their kidnaped son would be back in their arms, the campaign to recover the baby appeared to be entering a new stage.

Haggard, but hopeful, Col. Lindbergh was ready to make a deal—any sort of deal—with the kidnapers of his baby son.

With the path made easy to his door, the famous aviator waited patiently for word from those who snatched away the baby as he slept in his nursery crib on Tuesday night.

The colonel and his distraught wife, the former Anne Morrow, were ready to pay . . . ready to promise . . . ready to agree . . . to ransom, immunity, secrecy.

ROAD CLEAR FOR KIDNAPERS

The estate was cleared over a two-mile area of everybody but the troopers necessary to keep it clear.

If the kidnapers only know it, they may walk up the winding lane to the isolated Lindbergh homestead and conclude their barter.

The Lindberghs are not working with the police for fear it might conflict with negotiations which they are willing to conduct in good faith.

Neither are the police working with the Lindberghs—lest it would prevent the first baby of the land from being recovered.

The Lindberghs, still sleepless, appeared more cheerful today than at any time since the disappearance of the baby more than 36 hours ago.

Anyway, calm and quiet pervaded the hills and valleys of the wooded Lindbergh estate.

LINDY NEGOTIATES WITH KIDNAPERS FOR BABY'S RETURN

NEGOTIATIONS KEPT SECRET

It was not disclosed upon what expectation Col. Lindbergh based his belief that the baby would be returned safe and sound.

However, the Colonel had declared he would pay any sum to recover his child, and awaited only word from the kidnapers as to "the means and occasion."

The kidnapers left behind a ransom note after they had stolen the golden-haired baby from his crib some time between 8 p. m. and 10 p. m. Tuesday.

Lest possible negotiations with the kidnaping band be compromised, Col. Lindbergh declined to admit the presence of the note nor would any member of his household disclose the contents. However, it was reported that the ransom sum of $50,000 was demanded.

With "official" information shut down on the estate, multi-winged rumors continued to fly about.

A report was received that an automobile containing a "blue bundle" had entered the estate. It turned out that the state troopers had ordered five gallons of coffee and 100 sandwiches and that a blue blanket had been wrapped around the coffee to keep it warm.

PROMISING LEADS STUDIED

A report from Baltimore that the baby would be found in "a wicker basket in a bay window on the second floor of a house with a wall around it overlooking the Hudson River" caused a useless search of the residential district in the area by state troopers.

From the police angle, other promising leads included:

1. The sighting of a cabin cruiser 35 miles off Scotland Light aboard which was a crying baby and three men. The skipper of the craft, sailing aimlessly, requested a compass from a passing vessel.

2. The possibility of tracing the kidnaper through the bizarre construction of the home-made ladder used by him in climbing to the baby's nursery on the second floor.

3. The postcard mailed from Newark to "Charles Linberg, Princeton, N. J.," declaring the baby was safe and to wait for instructions.

COAST LINE COMBED

In the belief the kidnapers might have motored from the Lindbergh home to the Atlantic Coast and established a floating "hideout" aboard some craft, the New Jersey coast was combed by patrol boats of the Coast Guard.

A mysterious speedboat, anchored in Otten River, near Wildwood, N. J., was ordered inspected. The craft was cut off from open water by a drawbridge, and the bridge gate tender received orders not to raise the bridge until authorities arrived.

Five men aboard the craft were later questioned. Police then announced that the vessel had no part in the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

Another report that a baby had been seen on a cabin cruiser with three men aboard was received by the Coast Guard. The tip came from a rumrunner, also doing his share in the hunt. He said the cruiser was 30 miles off Scotland Light (about five miles off Sandy Hook) and was sailing aimlessly.

GO-BETWEENS DENIED

Col. Lindbergh denied emphatically that he had empowered anyone to negotiate with the kidnapers and make arrangements for the payment of a ransom.

State police said the Lindberghs had received no communication from the kidnapers, other than the purported one written on the back of a government postcard.

In crude printing, it read:

"Baby safe. Instructions later. Act accordingly."

The daring of the baby-raid was emphasized by the discovery that the kidnaper in climbing up to the second-story window had to place his ladder in front of a window of the library on the ground floor.

LADDER IMPORTANT CLUE

The home-made ladder used by the kidnaper may turn out to prove one of the most important clues in the case. Each of its three sections is seven feet long. They are made of new southern white pine. The bottom section had the steps nailed on the uprights as if its user had found that the first two sections did not reach the window, and had made an addition.

tween the Yangtze on the north and the Nanking region on the south.

The Japanese had achieved their objective of driving the 19th Army back at least 12½ miles but it was by no means certain that the Chinese would permit the enemy occupation to go unchallenged.

The newly-occupied zone in the hands of the Japanese is bordered on the south by the Shanghai-Nanking Railway and on the east by the Whangpoo River. To the west the Paoshan forts appeared to be still in the hands of the Chinese, but they were hemmed in on all the shore sides.

Preparations for Parley Disclosed to U. S.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—Ambassador Debuchi, of Japan, told newspapermen today after a conference with Secretary Stimson he expected the truce will be definitely in effct at Shanghai tomorrow.

H added preparations would be made for the round table conference of all the interested foreign pawers about the settlement of the situation.

De buchi said he did not anticipate any attacks of consequence upon the Japanese by the retreating Chinese forces, as the Chinese were already beyond the 12½-mile zone originally stipulated by the Japanese.

The ambassador said there were many details to be worked out to adjust the Shanghai situation and that the conference probably will be of considerable duration. It will be necessary to take steps to protect the lives and property of foreigners in the International Settlement from any future outbreaks, he added.

CITY PAY CHEAT ADMITTED

A warrant charging Ray Willoughby, 35, of 3817 Greentree street, a clerk in the Department of Public Works until October, with fraudulent conversion, embezzlement and larceny, was filed today by City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt.

Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang earlier in the day said Willoughby had confessed to padding payrolls and keeping the money thus obtained.

Lang said Willoughby had taken about $750 by entering time cards for days certain employes did not work.

Willoughby was arrested last night by city detectives who are aiding Director Lang in his investigation of alleged irregularities in his department's payroll.

Weather Conditions.

The disturbance that threatened rain over this section for last night and today is moved rapidly eastward, producing only light rains in the Ohio Valley states yesterday. This morning lows are centered over Eastern Texas and Utah and highs over the Hudson Bay section and southward over the Great Lakes and over the Canadian Northwest. The resulting weather for the country as a whole is cloudy with rain or snowfall at many points, especially in the Lower Mississippi Valley and over the Rocky Mountain states. The weather continues mild except in the Northwest, where rising barometer causes a marked drop in temperature to near zero. Mild weather will continue over this section for the next 48 hours.

COUNTERFEIT PLANT RAIDED

The source of counterfeit coins with which the lower North Side has been flooded was found early today when police and government agents seized moulds, counterfeiting paraphernalia and bogus coins in the rooms of Ruben Thornberry, 1224 Arch street, according to a police report.

Thornberry leaped from a second story window into the arms of policemen who had surrounded the house. The raid was made by W. A. Landvoight and Fred Gruber, of the Secret Service Bureau, and Police Inspector Charles Faulkner.

The raid followed the arrest by the agents of Hawthorne Thornberg, also known as "Prince Ramon Fabo," a tea-leaf fortune teller. The agents said they found coins on him, and he implicated Thornberry, they said. Another suspect, James Murray, of 112 Stockton avenue, was arrested, but was released later, according to the agents.

North Side Pair Held In Counterfeit Quiz

Mele Rudolph and wife, Helen, 23, of 203 East Ohio street, today were held for investigation by police. Yesterday in Police Court John Russell, North Side, testified he obtained a bogus $5 note from Rudolph and today said he had purchased 10 for $20. Rudolph, according to police, said he found the bogus money in a restaurant. Russell, with Henry Apple, of 1205 Sandusky street, had been arrested when it was alleged he attempted to pass one of the bogus bills on a taxicab driver.

DEATH HIGHWAY PATROLED FOR KIDNAPERS

2 Abduction Gangs Sought Along Road Where Blonde, Dague Killed Patrolman

BUTLER, Pa., March 3.—(AP.)—The highway where guns spat death months ago upon Corp. Brady Paul, of the state highway patrol, is patrolled again today for criminals—this time the kidnapers of two children.

The Butler-New Castle road became a focal point in the Western Pennsylvania search for James DeJute, 11, stolen at Niles, O., yesterday. Here state police also cast a net in the hope of apprehending the kidnapers of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

While the chances probably are remote that the persons who stole the Lindbergh baby reached this section, the state police are watching every automobile closely at road junctions.

SEEK NILES CHILD

There seemed greater likelihood that the DeJute child was carried into Pennsylvania. Officers at New Castle were told that the automobile of the kidnapers headed toward that city.

Along this stretch of roadway on December 27, 1929, Corp. Paul fought his grim gun battle with Irene Shroder and Walter Glenn Dague. He stopped them as they fled toward New Castle after a store robbery at Butler.

Then, as now, the highway was watched closely for trace of the bandits. Though state police and highway patrolmen were on the scene soon after the killing, the bandits found the highway an easy avenue for escape.

CAUGHT IN WEST

Mrs. Shroder and Dague fled toward New Castle to evade capture, and, using by-roads, they succeeded in escaping the police net. They were caught in the middle of January in far Arizona.

The police hoped they had laid a more secure trap in the kidnaping hunt. They went on duty soon after the report of the Lindbergh kidnaping was received, and so were patroling the highway when the DeJute boy was carried off yesterday morning.

All highway junctions in Western Pennsylvania have their details of police officers. Cars are searched and the occupants questioned before they are permitted to proceed.

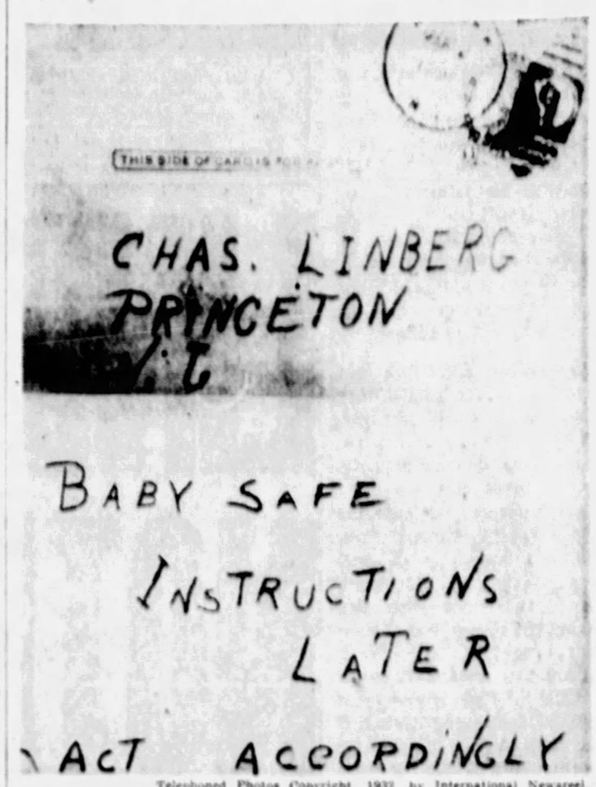
POSTCARD TO LINDY



Telephoned Photos Copyright, 1932, by International Newsreel.

BOTH SIDES OF THE POSTCARD SENT TO LINDY YESTERDAY

The postcard, obviously done with exaggerated disguise, mailed in Newark, N. J., to "Chas. Linberg." Here are both sides, with little to be said other than that which the message itself sets forth.

LETTER NAMES HIDEOUT

it was learned that part of its contents were:

"I don't want to tell you or say how I got this information in my possession. The information is right. You should act at once. I urge you to do so. Your son is held by two men and a woman at 163 ——" hTere was considerable telephoning between Boston police and New Jersey state police.

The letter was sealed after it was opened at police headquarters and will be sent to Col. Lindbergh by airplane.

Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley immediately set in motion official machinery to visit the spot named in the letter.

HAVE FAITH IN CLUE

Permission to open the letter had been given Boston police and postal inspectors by Col. Lindbergh by telephone and telegraph from his home in Hopewell, N. J. Supt. Crowley explained:

"All I can tell you is that it looks good and that the place mentioned is near New Jersey.

"I consider the information in the letter very excellent information.

"The letter names the county, describes the home and tells where the baby can be found. It gives the authorities definite information how to get to the hiding place.

"It is not in this state.

"It wouldn't be fair to tell you just where it is yet. We must get in touch with the authorities of the place mentioned first. We have been unable to get in touch with them yet."

RUSH URGED

On the face of the envelope was typewritten:

"Please spare no efforts to have this message concerning Col. Lindbergh's son rushed with all speed possible. There is no hope but it is a vitally important communication."

Search for the kidnaper in this district was further intensified when state police received the following bulletined request from Connecticut authorities:

"The Rhode Island state police request we step car New York registration N-3838. There are two women and a man and a baby in it. Rhode Island police unable to stop. Think possible Lindbergh baby."

LINDY POSTCARD LAID TO WOMAN

A woman wrote the postcard received by Col. Charles Lindbergh, from Newark, N. J., telling him the baby is safe and to follow instructions, M. A. Nernberg, handwriting expert, said today.

After examining newspaper photographic copies of the postcard, Nernberg said:

"It is the work of a woman, is amateurish and does not reflect the handwriting of professional kidnapers or gangsters.

"The woman evidently wasn't satisfied with the note, and retraced the printing. It was possibly written hurriedly in the postoffice. The delicacy of pressure, revealed under the microscope, assures me it was a woman."

Nernberg says he has had considerable experience in examining handwriting of gangsters and racketeers and this card does not show any of the characteristics of that class of criminals.

Boy Emperor Spurns Post in Manchuria

MUKDEN, March 3.—(INS.)—Henry Pu-Yi, former "Boy Emperor" of China and Japanese choice as "chief executive" of the new independent state of Manchuria, today turned down the offer of the position, because he feels it is beneath his dignity.

In a 20-minute talk in his Port Arthur home with representatives of the new government, Pu-Yi pointed out that his family's former sovereignty over all China prevented his accepting what he considers a minor post.

Doughboys Resume Patrol at Shanghai

SHANGHAI, March 3.—(AP.)—Three hundred United States infantrymen of the 31st Regiment resumed their patrol over the defense lines of the International Settlement next to Chapei this afternoon. They were relieved from patrol on this sector on February 29.

Weird Ghosts Haunt Lindy's Neighbors

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 3.—(AP.)—The sourlands—that group of eerie and uninhabited hills on the Mercer Hunterdon County line in which nestles the home of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, is notorious in local folklore as the scene of strange and weird legend.

Charley Sutphin, who has lived in the region all of his 70 years, will tell you what he has seen and heard.

On cold, still nights when the frost is in the ground, Charley says he has heard the roars of Stook the Butcher and the frenzied shrieks of Stook's girl as she feels her sweetheart's fingers on her throat.

DEVIL'S STRONGHOLD

Other things has Charley seen, and many more has he heard. Once this place was the devil's own stronghold, and when he wanted to build a wall to separate the east from the west he flew to Maine for material. Back he came, soaring over New York and the bay across Navesink, turning where the Raritan flows, slyly winking at a parson's daughter in Bridgewater. Up and on to Neshanic, and there his apron strings broke and the rocks came tumbling down.

And Charley himself has seen the devil's doorway he built near the place where the Lindberghs make their home; and the rocks called the Three Brothers, standing over against the skyline on the hill, named for the hermit Pero who lived nearby in a cave.

FIDDLING WRAITH

Sam Crue, Negro and racial brother of Charley, was shot to death in Princeton basin, and Dory Cruse was beaten fatally in 1873. On certain night, legend has it, their manes return to earth and stalk the living along the lonely roads. And high in the desolate reaches of the stony hills Pete Nixon's wraith floats along to the saddening music of his fiddle, in vain quest of the head of Ben Peterson, removed with a shotgun in 1877.

Up from their graves in the sourlands come the restless souls of others who were looking for their ancient friends, the rye and applejack distillers at Dawlis Mills in the village of Amwell, at Drake's in Woodsville, at old Peter Dill's place in Post Town near the Devil's Half-Acre, and at Larison's Corner, Ringoes, Neshanic and Van Liew's Corner and Mount Rose.

Old Charley affirms the episode of the muzzy woodchopper, who, made brave by applejack, dared touch one of the spectral females, or rather tried to. Her hand slithered across his cheek and to his death he bore the imprint of her wrath.

These things, also, do Charley's wife, Rene Wilson Sutphin, and his brother-in-law, Hank Wilson, believe and repeat. And they are not alone, for William Dean, of North Main street, tells of the affair of the late Rev. George E. Eaton, who once served the Baptistry of the sourlands.

Late one night on the Rileyville-Hopewell road, riding home from the deathbed of a member of the congregation, the minister met a man on a white horse. He recognized him as the man who had died within the hour. Said the wraith:

"Meet me tonight in the dark woods."

"I cannot."

"Then hold out your hand."

The minister put out his hand, and the wraith touched it. From that time until his death Mr. Eaton's arm was useless, Dean affirms.

On Trail of Lindbergh's Stolen Baby

Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania police, in a teletype message from Philadelphia, today were ordered to arrest two men and a woman with a baby wrapped in a quilt, who left Philadelphia for Pittsburgh after speeding away from a gasoline station in the eastern city without waiting for their change.

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 3.—State police this afternoon were trailing a green sedan, containing three men, two women, a small child and a baby, following a tip from a lunchroom in Export that the car might contain the Lindbergh baby. The car was driven in the direction of Blairsville.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., March 3.—(INS.)—Secrecy today veiled the movements of a squad of 10 picked state troopers believed scouring the mountain regions after receiving a "tip" in the kidnaping of the infant son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., March 3.—(INS.)—A general alarm was sent out on the police teletype system today for a sedan automobile containing a man, woman and baby, seen on the Post road here last night.

NEWARK, N. J., March 3.—(AP.)—Another lindbergh baby-kidnaping clue—the story of a Pennington (N. J.) waitress—came to nothing today. It was revealed that three men who asked her for directions to the Lindbergh home last week were three news reel photographers.

NURSE GRIEVES FOR LINDY BABY

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 3.—(AP.)—One of the most distracted and forlorn members of the Lindbergh household is Miss Betty Gow, whose full-time responsibility has been tending the Lindbergh baby since he was 6 weeks old.

To her had been entrusted one of the most envied and most important jobs in domestic circles, that of dispatching with meticulous care and scientific understanding the nursery duties for the heir of the famous couple.

More a labor of devotion than a job to her, this routine of studied diet, visiting hours and the insistence of his parents that the Lindbergh baby should lead a private life, unspoiled by the attention of even most intimate friends.

Possessing almost the same poise which characterizes her mistress, Miss Gow, nevertheless, was broken today. Her young, dark eyes expressed her fear for her little charge and her normally rose-tinted cheeks were pale.

Miss Gow, a friend of Elizabeth Morrow's maid, was selected for Anne Lindbergh's baby, by her sister, after careful thought.

THE HOME-MADE, SECTIONAL LADDERS USED BY KIDNAPERS

CAPONE PRISON BEING CHOSEN

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—The Atlanta and Leavenworth penitentiaries are being considered by the Justice Department for future imprisonment of Al Capone, Chicago gangster.

At the Justice Department Henry C. Laubenheimer, United States marshal at Chicago, has been in conference with Sanford Bates, director of the Federal Prison Bureau, on where Capone shall be transferred from Cook County Jail.

CHICAGO, March 3.—(AP.)—Al Capone has offered from his county jail cell a reward of $10,000 for the safe return of the Lindbergh baby and the capture of his kidnapers.

Capone, whose own name several times has been mentioned in Chicago abductions, declared:

"It's the most outrageous thing I ever heard of. I know how Mrs. Capone and I would feel if our son were kidnaped, and I sympathize with the Lindberghs."

Baby Lindy to See First Show If Returned

NEW YORK, March 3.—(INS.)—If, as his father expects, the kidnapers restore Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., to his home today, the 20-month-old baby may still attend his first theater party next Saturday.

"The pleasure of his company" was requested in a special invitation he was sent early Tuesday to attend the premier of "The Painted Pig," a one-act drama based on a children's tale written by his grandmother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow.

The production is to be held in the McIlan Little Theater at Columbia University. The entire Lindbergh and Morrow families were invited to see it. It may be canceled, if Baby Lindbergh is not returned by Saturday.

KIDNAPING QUIZ MAKES MAN ILL

Ernest Clark, of Sarver, father of Leslie Clark, who was questioned by state police following a report that his car was seen near the Lindbergh home after the kidnaping, was ill in his home today as a result of the police investigation, relatives said.

Leslie, who satisfied police his machine had not been out of Sarver recently, said his father was not seriously ill, but that the excitement of the visit resulted in his collapse.

Discussing the mistake made by police, Leslie said it was one of the oddest things he had encountered. His youngest brother, he said, was named for Charles Augustus Lindbergh and the Flying Colonel is the family's most popular hero.

Woman From Lindy Home Scans Photos

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—A woman from the Lindbergh household, accompanied by a man, visited police headquarters today and looked over the rogues gallery pictures in the Bureau of Criminal identification.

Police declined to discuss the identity of the two persons and were reluctant to discuss the matter, but it was learned from a high police official that the woman was a member of the Lindbergh household.

Plane Strikes Tree, Passenger Killed

DEAL, N. J., March 3.—(AP.)—Vincent House, was killed in an airplane crash at the field of the East Coast Flying Service, Ocean Township, late yesterday.

House, an employe at the field, was a passenger in a plane piloted by Albert Worth, manager of the service. Worth escaped serious injury. Witnesses said Worth started to bring the plane down and struck a tree at the edge of the field.

Lindbergh Kidnaping Laid To 'Thrill' Criminal

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 3.—(AP.)—The kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby, said Dr. Louis J. Bragman, psychiatrist of the college of medicine, Syracuse University, today, is evidently a "thrill criminal," who, if true to type, probably has the child safe.

The case seems to involve the pathological action of a criminal who had apparently contemplated every element of danger for the greatest possible thrill, said the psychiatrist.

Thrill kidnapers, said he, are the ordinary ransom-beggars. He added:

"They are cunning fools, afflicted with nerve-compulsion quite like the kleptomaniac who cannot resist shoplifting, and the pyromaniac who sets fire to buildings for the excitement of it. Their instincts and mad ingenuity carry them through complex plans and involved situations. They sometimes baffle the most intelligent detectives because they operate under the pressure of insanity."

There are two leading types of pathological cases in the kidnaping species Dr. Bragman said, these being the thrill-seekers and the money-seekers.

The desire for money was not the motive of the kidnaper of 20-month-old Charles Lindbergh, according to the psychiatrist, who explained:

"Every act thus far points to the work of a person who contemplated the misdeed over a period of time, a person who daydreams and wanders through the escapades before the act is committed, who selects the most popular of individuals for his victim.

"It is the habit of such a person to keep the infant in good care and watch the excitement of the world with savage joy. He follows the newspapers carefully and trails the movements of the police with a singular excitement."

Mrs. Hoover Eager For Kidnaping News

GREEN COVE SPRINGS, Fla., March 3.—(AP.)—Great anxiety was shown by Mrs. Herbert Hoover today over the fate of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby. She sent a secret service agent ashore from the motorship, Sequoia, to obtain latest news of the search.

Plans for the continuation of Mrs. Hoover's Southern cruise aboard the Sequoia were not announced.

Convicts Seeking Parole Awed by Kidnaping

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Cal., March 3.—(INS.)—For nearly four years, Edward Morris, 41, and Robert Corbett, 33, convicted Los Angeles kidnapers, have been in prison awaiting opportunities to voice parole pleas before the State Board.

By coincidence, their cases came before the board within 24 hours after the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. Morris said:

"Gosh, this is a tough time to ask leniency."

Corbett, former prize fighter, added:

"The terror of the New Jersey job is enough to make us withdraw our pleas. We're sorry for Lindy."

The board postponed action on the cases until next month, relieving the prisoners' anxiety.

NATION THROWS ALL AGENCIES INTO SEARCH

Hunt for Lindbergh Baby By Air, Land and Sea; Radio and Televison Used

International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The entire American nation was galvanized today into action to hunt by air, by land, by sea, for the abductors of the world's best beloved baby, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.

Federal, state and local authorities threw all their mighty resources into the unprecedently vast and alert pursuit of the criminals, while citizens everywhere constituted themselves detectives seeking some trace of the baby or its kidnapers.

Modern mechanical aids were linked to the huge man power mobilized in following clues, however scanty, in watching railroad terminals, airports, bridges, highways, ferries and crossing points along the Canadian and Mexican borders.

AUTOS SEARCHED

Especially in the east, since the famous baby of the famous flying colonel, Charles A. Lindbergh, was taken from its crib at Hopewell, N. J., thousands of automobiles were halted, searched, and the occupants made to identify themselves.

Federal Secret Service agents entered on "Lindbergh duty" on orders of President Hoover. Coast Guard units watched for the kidnapers along the Atlantic and the Great Lakes.

Radio, television, radio teletype alarms, were impressed into service.

In New York, Police Commissioner Mulrooney promulgated an extraordinary order to his force of nearly 20,000 policemen and detectives to join the intense pursuit of the kidnapers with the greatest vigor and to stay on duty "around the clock" until the baby is found.

All those who entered or left the city by train or tube or ferry or automobile were carefully scrutinized. "Baby farms," hotels, lodging houses were visited by searchers in the hope of unearthing some new clue to the Lindbergh baby.

ROADS UNDER GUARD

Airplanes circled aloft over wide areas of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and other states, often with famous pilots at the controls who hoped to spot some suspicious looking car on an isolated "hide-away" which might harbor the abductors and the world's most famous child.

Maj. Frank M. Nicholas, commander of state police in Connecticut, ordered every man out of barracks and on duty in the hunt. Similar action was taken by M. J. John A. Warner, superintendent of New York State Police, at Albany.

Throughout New England the roads from New York were placed under specially heavy guards.

Virginia, South Carolina, Indiana and other Southern and Middle Western states enlisted in the efforts to capture the kidnapers. In many places, the American Legion instructed its posts to help.

TELEVISION SENDS PICTURES

Three different photographs of the Lindbergh baby were televised, marking the first time that this latest modern marvel was used in a manhunt.

Broadcasting stations also carried the appeal of Mrs. Lindbergh, transmitted by Gov. Moore, of New Jersey, that whoever has the baby protect him against ill health. A special diet to which Charles Augustus, Jr., is accustomed, was given over the air for the guidance of the kidnapers in feeding him.

A special fleet of airplanes flew over the Lindbergh home and experts made aerial photographs of the whole region surrounding the dwelling.

Three Sects Unite In Prayer for Baby

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—Catholic, Protestant and Jew united yesterday in prayer to a common God for safe return of the kidnaped baby of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The prayers were uttered by the Rev. Joseph Patton McComas, vicar of St. Patrick's Chapel, Trinity Church; Monsignor William E. Cashin, rector of St. Andrew's Church, and Rabbi Samuel J. Levinson, of Temple Beth Emeth, and were broadcast over the municipal radio station, WNYC.

Curious Students Get Kidnaping Quiz

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 3.—(AP.)—Two young law students spent a few uncomfortable minutes here last night because the "man in the street" has taken such a keen interest in the finding of the Lindbergh baby kidnapers.

The students strolled into the business office of a morning newspaper and asked numerous questions about the kidnaping. An office boy became suspicious and notified police. Three detectives detained the students until they had established their identity.

Stop Jeannette Man In Kidnaping Hunt

OIL CITY, Pa., March 3.—(AP.)—Officers on the lookout for the Lindbergh kidnapers stopped a blue sedan on the outskirts of Oil City last night. Pedestrians saw a baby in the machine and notified police.

Occupants of the car were K. B. Hostetter and a party of friends from Jeannette, Pa., en route to visit friends. The baby is the little daughter of Mrs. Alice Hoister, of Manor, Pa.

DENIES SEEKING KLINE DELAY

Reports that Mayor Charles H. Kline would ask for a postponement of his trial at Butler, March 14, on misdemeanor charges, growing out of the Department of Supplies audit, because of a physical breakdown, were denied today by Edward G. Coll, one of his counsel.

The Mayor and his deposed Director of Supplies, Bertram L. Succop, who will be tried jointly with Kline, together with their counsel will go to Butler March 13, a day ahead of the time set for the trial, it was stated. Discussing reports about the Mayor, Coll said:

"We will not ask for any postponement of this case. We are going to trial March 14 and will go right through with it, in the regular way. Mayor Kline is mentally and physically O. K. There is no basis for rumors that his physical condition is not good."

Mayor Kline, Succop and their counsel have engaged quarters at the Hotel Nixon, where District Attorney Andrew T. Park, Assistant District Attorney G. F. P. Langfitt and staff have engaged the top floor of the hotel. The case was sent to Butler for trial, following application by Kline and Succop to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, for a change of venue.

BABY KIDNAPING FELT KEENLY BY ROGERS

Friends' Affliction Makes Comedian Sad; Recalls Child's Play on Recent Visit

SANTA MONICA, Cal., March 3.—There were tears today in the eyes of the man who keeps America happy.

Just two weeks ago Sunday, Will Rogers bounced Col. Lindbergh's baby boy on his knee.

With Mrs. Rogers, the cowboy philosopher had passed the day with the Lindberghs in their Hopewell, N. J., home.

"He's the cutest little feller you ever saw. His hair is just like Lindy's except more so, because he's got hundreds of golden ringlets all over his head."

TELLS OF BABY'S PLAY

Rogers walked back and forth on the lawn in front of his white ranch house, perched high in the Santa Monica hills. His eyes were on the ground; his arms behind him.

"His face is just like his mother's and he's got her real blue eyes, too. He was the happiest little feller, jabbering and gurgling away. He was talking away all the time and saying the usual things that a baby that age does—mamma and daddy and that sort of thing.

"We were all down in a kind of a big sunroom and Mrs. Morrow was there and the nurse brought the baby in all dressed up with blue knee pants and a blue blouse with a white tie. A kind of a blue serge suit that sorta matched his blue eyes.

"Mrs. Lindbergh sat on the floor and built blocks for him for a long time and he would knock them down and laugh and she wou'n build them up again just like any other happy mother and her baby.

"Lindy would toss a sofa pillow at the little feller and it was a game the child seemed to like a whole lot."

THOUGHT OF THEIR OWN

"I watched the baby trying to get up and down the steps that led into the sunroom and I looked at Mrs. Rogers and she was looking at me and we were both thinking away back when our big youngsters were toddling up and down steps and it made us both happy to be watching that baby because we're so crazy about the little fellers.

"I asked Lindy if he had taken the baby airplane riding and he said he hadn't. You know Lindy don't say a whole lot, but he sure is wrapped up in that real boy of his."

Rogers wiped from his glasses a mist—a mist that had not been caused by any atmospheric condition—and put them on again. A moment later he removed them and again nervously beat them against the palm of his hand.

"Generally speaking, I'm not in favor of lynchings and mob law and that sort of thing, but I'd gladly be a one-man lynching party in this case.

NEED LITTLE FELLOW

"When Mrs. Rogers and me got ready to leave after one of the most pleasant days we had ever had, we went out to the car and there was little Lindy, Jr., climbing all over the back seat. We told him goodbye and started away, and as we were driving along Mrs. Rogers and I both spoke what was on our minds, and that was, we need a little feller around the house now, with our own two boys so grown now."

With a gesture Rogers seemed to encircle his big ranch.

"We got all this space and a lotta gentle ponies for little ones to ride and all we need are some little ones up here to make us mighty happy. Mrs. Rogers called me up from Claremore, Okla., early this morning about the Lindbergh baby and she was so choked up she couldn't talk. It was like it all happened to our own."

The whole eastern half of the United States and Canada became a field for the nation's greatest man-hunt. Thousands of automobiles were stopped, while bridges, ferries, railroads, steamship lines, interurban buses and other methods of travel were carefully guarded.

MIDDLEBURG, Pa., March 3.—(AP.)—Calm and unperturbed, Jonathan Gemberling, Jr., 18, of Lewistown, today heard a Snyder County jury convict him of murder in the first degree for killing A. LeRoy Hackenberg, of Mount Pleasant Mills, January 4.

The jury recommended life imprisonment, but Judge Curtis C. Lesher withheld sentence.

Mrs. Gemberling, the mother, sat dazed, apparently stunned by the verdict. Jonathan's aged grandfather, William Gemberling, wept. Mrs. Hackenberg was in court, but displayed no emotion.

Troopers Moved By Suffering Of Anne

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 3.—(AP.)—Troopers on the Lindbergh estate catch a fleeting glimpse now and then of a face peering from the window of the nursery from which the Lindbergh baby was stolen.

It is white and haggard. It is the face of Mrs. Anne Lindbergh, the child's mother. To the troopers with wives and children of their own it is the most harrowing part of the tragedy.

10,000 Officers' Wives Join Search

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—An army of more than 10,000 women, most of them with children of their own, is on the watch here for the kidnapers of the Lindbergh child.

SPLIT ON RATE DELAYS TAX MEASURE

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Sharp division in the House Ways and Means Committee over excises and the rate of the proposed manufacturers sales tax today delayed final preparation of a bill raising more than a billion dollars additional revenue a year.

Despite the inability of the committee to agree in its first session, Representative Hawley, of Oregon, ranking Republican, predicted the bill would be completed by Saturday.

With politics buried in the committee, Hawley joined Representative Crisp (Dem.), of Georgia, acting chairman, in predicting that "a non-partisan American tax bill" will be reported.

AGREE TO ESTATE TAX

The committee was divided over the rate on the manufacturers tax, Crisp said. Tentatively fixed at 2¼ per cent to raise $625,000,000 a year, the committee considered demands for a maximum of 2 per cent.

Exemptions, too, were in doubt as the "farm bloc" pressed for exemption of processed meats.

The committee had agreed upon estate tax rates and a gift tax, understood to reach a maximum of 40 per cent on millionaires. This also is expected to be the maximum on income taxes.

The tentative draft of the bill being considered calls for lowering of the exemption on personal incomes to $1,000 for single persons and $2,500 for married taxpayers.

PLAN LEVY ON STOCK

Other provisions in the tentative draft include a tax on borrowed stock as a blow at short selling, tax on amusement admissions above 25 cents and corporation income tax of 13 per cent.

As the bill now stands, according to the interpretation of some members, gasoline would be included in the manufacturers' sales tax.

The committee also expected to consider a proposed tax on electricity and illuminating gas, a tax on foreign oil and a levy on stock transfers.

Representatives of theatrical, motion picture and other amusement industries continued to bombard the committee with protests against the admissions tax, and oil interests were on guard against a federal gasoline tax.

Garner Entered In Nebraska Race

LINCOLN, Neb., March 3.—(INS.)—Names of three more presidential candidates—Representative John N. Garner, of Texas; Gov. William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, Democrats, and Senator Joseph P. France, of Maryland, Republican—today were added to the Nebraska primary ballot.

The Garner petition carried nearly 3,000 names. Eight hundred signed for Murray. Since it is said President Hoover's name will not be filed here, France is the only Republican presidential candidate in the state.

Vatican Secretary Honored by Italy

ROME, March 3.—(AP.)—King Victor Emanuel conferred the Collar of the Annunziata today on Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, papal secretary of state, making him "a cousin to the King." The Annunziata is the highest Italian order and is the one which was given Premier Benito Mussolini.

LEAGUE COURT SPLIT REVIVED IN SENATE

Reed's Draft, Approved by Committee, Finds Friends, Foes at Odds on Ruling

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 3. The League Court fight in the Senate developed today into an amazing confusion of interpretations concerning the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's adoption of a declaration against advisory opinions on questions involving American interests.

This expression of the committee's unanimous sentiment against advisory opinions, as drawn by Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, was called a "reservation" by the irreconcilables who oppose American adherence. They insist every other signatory nation would have to accept it before America can enter the court. Otherwise, they said, it would be a meaningless gesture.

FRIENDS DIVIDED

Friends of the court called it a "statement of understanding," but they were divided over its potential effect. Senator Reed, the author, declared it was as binding on the court as a reservation and that failure to observe it would eject America from the court.

Senator Walsh (Dem.), of Montana, leader of the League Court movement, described it as an "interpretation" of the Root protocol. He said that any dispute over its binding effect would have to be settled by the court itself after America became a member.

The reservation, declaration or interpretation, read:

"Said (Root) protocol is ratified with the clear understanding that the Permanent Court of International Justice shall not, without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest."

OLD RESERVATION

This was the old irreconcilable reservation, number 5, which kept America out of the court even though the Senate ratified the original protocol. A number of European nations refused to accept this reservation and American entry was blocked. Afterwards, Elihu Root headed a commission which redrafted the American reservations until they were acceptable to the European signatories of the court.

TWO RESCUED IN CARRICK FIRE

An invalid woman and her 11-year-old daughter were rescued, and her husband leaped to safety from a porch roof, when flames destroyed their home, 1214 Theona street, Carrick, early today.

A blazing stairway trapped Phillip W. Ellinger while he was attempting to carry his wife, Mrs. Marie Ellinger, and their daughter, Audrey, to safety. He crashed through a window to the porch and leaped to summon aid.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Ellinger managed to drag her daughter through the window to the roof, where Edward Koenig had climbed to assist her. Mother and daughter were lowered to safety below.

Following the rescue, Audrey cried for "Fluffy," her pet dog. The animal, firemen learned, had perished in the fire.

The blaze is believed to have started in the first-floor kitchen. It spread through the entire two-story dwelling. Battalion Chief John H. Frazier estimated the damage at $3,500.

Monopoly Charged To Plane Industry

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—Monopoly in the airplane industry was charged before the House Postoffice Committee today by Representative Maas (Rep.), of Minnesota.

Maas, testifying in the committee's investigation of the present air mail contract letting system, said the great airplane concerns were freezing out independent inventors and manufacturers of equipment.

Regional Offices For Vets Opposed

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—A bill to abolish all regional offices of the veterans' administration and to designate local medical examiners for veterans was introduced today by Representative Milligan, of Missouri, as a Democratic economy measure.

HOUSE TO VOTE ON WHEAT GIFT

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—The House made ready today to draw upon the Farm Board's record hoard of wheat, to supply food for the country's unemployed.

Certain of enactment, the Senate's bill assigning 40,000,000 bushels of this grain for relief purposes, was given a clear field in today's debate, with a final vote expected by nightfall.

The Red Cross, through John Barton Payne, chairman, has already said it is willing to undertake distribution of the wheat. There has been no indication that President Hoover would disapprove the bill. Speaker Garner who favors the bill, said:

"We bought and paid for it and I don't see any reason why the hungry people can't have the benefit of it."

5 MILLION ASK VETS BE PAID

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(INS.)—Petitions representing between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 people have reached Washington asking complete payment of soldiers' adjusted service certificates, Representative Wright Patman (Dem.), of Texas, said today.

All congressional records for the number of signers and organizations to petitions have been broken, he added.

A portion of the bales of petitions gathered through the Disabled American Veterans and Veterans of Foreign Wars have already been presented to Congress as the prelude to the fight for payment.

With disposition of the tax increase bill next week, the House Ways and Means Committee will hold a hearing on Patman's cash payment bill.

Youth Fleeing from Dry Agents Drowns

MILFORD, Del., March 3.—(AP.)—An 18-year-old boy drowned in the Mispillion River yesterday while attempting to escape two federal prohibition agents who sought to arrest him in connection with their raids on three stills here.

John Bennett, Jr., jumped into the river as the agents approached while two companions escaped through the woods. The agents ran for assistance but were too late to save him.

Jack Hoxie Ordered To Pay Alimony

LOS ANGELES, March 3.—(AP.)—Jack Hoxie, cowboy film actor, was ordered to pay his estranged wife, Marie Sais, film actress, $60 monthly for one year and attorney fees of $350 yesterday, pending her divorce action.

FEAR FOR BABY DELAYS LAWS

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(INS.)—Fears that hasty congressional legislation to make kidnaping a capital crime might inspire the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby to harm the child prompted the House Judiciary Committee today to defer any action on the kidnaping bills it has been considering.

After a lengthy session, the committee decided to defer further consideration of the Cochran bill and others until Tuesday.

Members felt that nothing should be done by the committee to interfere with the safe recovery of the baby. It was thought by some that there was a real hope of getting the child back through negotiation and that action should be delayed that might frighten the kidnapers.

HOUSESPEEDING LABOR BILL

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—"Yellow dog" contracts, under which laboring men are prevented from organizing to protect their interests, are practically sure now to be outlawed by Congress.

The Norris-LaGuardia bill, which puts a sharp limit on the power of federal courts to block strike activities by injunction, is being pushed so strongly in the House that an early vote is likely. Although some determined opposition is in sight for some of its provisions, the "yellow dog" outlawing among them, majority sentiment appears to favor a repetition of the overwhelming indorsement given the bill by the Senate.

The measure was approved in very short time by the Judiciary Committee yesterday.

TUBE PURCHASE DEBATED

Further hearings on the Wabash bridge and tunnel project will be held by the County Commissioners soon.

Downtown business men headed by Walter Rosenbaum and representatives of South Hills civic and municipal groups, urged immediate purchase of the bridge and tunnel at a special meeting of the Commissioners yesterday. Commissioner W. D. Mansfield, ill, did not attend.

Henry Tranter and James Fox, opponents of the project, said other county improvements should be completed before the bridge and tunnel are bought. Mrs. J. O. Miller, representing the League of Women Voters, said her organization asked exhaustive study by the City and County Planning Commissioners before any action is taken.

EAGLE APPEAL UP TO MITCHELL

Whether an appeal will be made to the United State Supreme Court from the reversal by the United States Circuit Court of the "padlock" injunction decree of the Federal District Court against the Eagles Lodge in New Kensington be decided by Attorney General William Mitchell. United States Attorney Louis E. Graham, who prosecuted the case in the District Court, said appeals to the Supreme Court emanate from the office of the Attorney General.

As the Circuit Court decision affects the "padlock" injunction decrees against six other Eagles lodges in Western Pennsylvania including the Pittsburgh lodge the decision is of unusual interest here, as is the Circuit Court's decision that prohibition agents entering clubs by use of fictitious membership cards, is "unethical and illegal."

A dispatch from Washington said Prohibition Commissioner W. W. Woodcock declared he disapproved such methods, and no bogus membership cards had been used by agents since he assumed charge of prohibition enforcement. The appeal was taken to the Circuit Court by Attorney D. P. MacQuarrie. The other Eagle lodges involved are at Johnstown, Altoona, Monongahela, Indiana and Clairton.

Flier Loses Life Testing New Plane

BETHANY, Conn., March 3.—(AP.)—Ellis McKeon of Wallingford, Conn., was killed yesterday when he jumped from a new type of airplane after a wing was lost in a test flight.

Although witnesses said his parachute opened properly, he was too near the ground for it to break the force of his fall. He was making the first flight under a new motor of an all-metal plane developed by a Naugatuck company.

DOCTORS FIGHT U. S. HOSPITAL CONSTRUCTION

Legion Joins in Parley on Caring for Veterans in Established Institutions

Plans for a state-wide campaign, as part of a national movement to protest governmental construction of hospitals for the treatment of injuries and illness of veterans, not related to service activities, will be discussed at a joint meeting of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the Pennsylvania Department, American Legion, in Harrisburg, March 12.

The construction program was held as unnecessary and an extravagance.

Dr. Walter F. Donaldson, editor of the Pittsburgh Medical Bulletin and Dr. Carl E. McKee, representing the Allegheny County Medical Society, will attend.

Discussing the proposed campaign, Dr. Donaldson said there are approximately 200,000 vacant beds in existing hospitals in the United States and the federal government is launched upon a program to provide 130,000 additional beds for the care of veterans at an estimated expenditure of $300,000,000.

Pointing out that there are sufficient beds in veterans' hospitals to care for veterans ill or injured as a result of war service, Dr. Donaldson added:

"We are not finding fault with the American Legion or with the disabled veterans. As a matter of fact the Legion is working with us in this campaign. Neither are we complaining against hospitalization, but the method of providing it. We believe the government could provide better hospitalization at far less cost by utilizing private hospital facilities instead of constructing and operating its own hospitals."

Reppert Studying Flood Relief Plea

Public Works Engineers Charles M. Reppert and J. Charles Palmer today were studying methods of relief for flooded thoroughfares in the Boundary street section from inadequate sewers.

Attorney Harold Irons, representing nearly 50 home owners in that section, appeared before Council yesterday and asked quick relief from the sewage which floods into homes during heavy storms. Damage estimated at $5,000 has been caused each of the homes, he said. Engineers told Council it would cost at least $450,000 to construct a modern sewer system in the neighborhood.

JAWORSKI PALS WIN IN COURT

DETROIT, March 3.—(INS.)—Frank Hallas and Joseph Janicke yesterday won a State Supreme Court reversal of the conviction that sent them to Marquette Prison for life for a $7 holdup in Detroit in 1929. It is expected the men will be brought to trial a second time. Hallas and Janicke were pals of Paul Jaworski, killer and bank bandit electrocuted in Pennsylvania several years ago.

Hallas was tried for the Detroit News holdup but was acquitted. Janicke and Hallas were convicted in another holdup. Priscilla Kruger, 16, sweetheart of Hallas, was sent to jail for a year for sending threatening letters to Cecila Stanchels, the holdup victim, warning her against testifying against Hallas and Janicke. The Supreme Court ruled the trial judge permitted prejudicial errors in the trial.

THE STORY OF JOHN N. GARNER

By George Rothwell Brown

(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc. All Rights Reserved.)

CHAPTER XII.

Tariff and taxation — the financing of the government. These are the public questions in which John N. Garner has been interested, above all others.

He has never permitted his mind to be diverted long from these subjects. Never have they been of more importance to the American people than they are today.

Few men in public life comprehend them.

A close student of finance, Garner deliberately shaped his career in the House in such directions that his tastes and talents could have full play.

As a result, the American people have profited enormously, especially average people in the ordinary walks of life. He has been their champion for more than a quarter of a century.

Born a poor boy on a farm, his youth was spent in hard work. When he began the practice of law in Uvalde County, Texas, he dwelt among plain people, living on the soil, and in daily struggle with Nature in one of her cruelest moods.

His Congressional district, when he first went to Congress, although larger than the State of Virginia, supported a population of only 160,244 persons, who lived in isolated settlements, big and small ranches, and little towns, weather-beaten, unpainted towns, scattered over a vast area.

Travel Was Difficult

Travel from one settlement to another was full of hardship and adventure. The population has since increased to 370,877. Prosperity has come to this part of Texas—a prosperity that has been tempered by the existing economic depression—but the people have never forgotten the bitter struggles of their early days.

A man reared in such an environment comes to have, like Lincoln, a gentle feeling for folks in the humbler stations of life. John N. Garner has been tremendously influenced throughout his Congressional career, by an innate sympathy for the "under dog."

His interest in taxation was not in seeing how the rich man and the powerful corporation could be relieved of their just share of the cost of government, but in seeing that the poor man was relieved of his burdens in every way possible.

During the World War, when America was lavishing her wealth upon Europe in such a golden stream as even Midas never dreamed of, nearly everyone lost sight of the all-important question as to whether the American people were ever going to get back what so generously poured into the coffers of the allied governments.

Asks About Loans

Garner kept this thought in mind, and one day at a hearing before the Ways and Means Committee, when William G. McAdoo was testifying, he asked President Wilson's Secretary of the Treasury, if the United States would get those loans back.

Secretary McAdoo replied that the United States would be repaid.

The reply was fixed in Garner's mind, although he expressed considerable doubt about it. So far as Garner was concerned, Mr. McAdoo was on record as to his understanding.

Many years later, when Garner had become Speaker of the House of Representatives, the body over which he presided passed an act at President Hoover's request, granting a moratorium to the European debtor nations for one year. But the House added a clause making it clear to Europe that the American people had loaned, not given that wealth to Europe, and that the war debts would not be canceled.

It was under Speaker Garner's leadership that this firm declaration was made a part of the moratorium. It may yet be the means of saving to the hard-pressed American people of today, and to their children, and to their children's children, billions of money earned by the sweat of labor and toil.

Work on Income Tax

Practically every feature of the present income tax law which serves the interest of the common man is the work of John N. Garner. When this law was under consideration he raised a virtual insurrection in the Ways and Means Committee. In the end he whipped Secretary Mellon to a standstill.

Garner is responsible, more than any other man, for the principle of the graduated income tax, and the inheritance features, written into the law. The committee had intended to report a flat income tax and inheritance tax. The militant Texan knocked this Republican scheme sky high.

It was Garner who put the graduated feature into both the income tax and the inheritance tax. There may be a difference of opinion as to the merit of this kind of taxation, but it was Garner's theory that these provisions best serve the interest of the poor man and make the rich bear their just share of the common burden. If he had not led the fight in 1924, and again in 1926, the House probably would have followed the example of the Senate in repealing the estate taxes.

Winning in the House, Garner was one of the conferees on the part of the House when the bill went to conference. There was an exciting moment in the conference, when Garner, and Greene, of Iowa, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, read the riot act to the Senate conferees.

Enforces His View

Garner told Senator Dave Reed, of Pennsylvania—Secretary Mellon's state—that the Senate would either take the House provisions or there wouldn't be any bill. The Senate conferees, and the Senate, finally gave in. It was a notable victory for Garner.

This was followed by the hardest fight ever made against Mr. Garner in his own district, that of the campaign of 1928. Some people seem to have got it into their minds that the man who had defeated Secretary Mellon's tax reduction program, in the face of White House and Wall street support, was a good man to keep down in Texas, but a bad one to keep in Washington.

And there was still another reason why Garner wasn't popular in Washington among those whose tax theories didn't square with his.

Reforms Accomplished

In 1926 Garner led a fight for the creation of a joint, nonpartisan committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. The committee was established, in February of that year. It is composed of five members of the Ways and Means Committee, of the House, and five members of the Finance Committee, of the Senate. A member of the House is the chairman. Its functions are to study the operation and effect of the internal revenue laws, and to report to Congress, and to investigate the administration of those laws.

A good many needed reforms were accomplished, and in 1928 Garner had some more teeth added. The committee was empowered to review all income tax refunds in excess of $75,000. As a result of this, it advocated numerous reforms, many of which have been adopted. The committee serves as a watchdog over refunds to taxpayers from the Federal Treasury. Garner, naturally, was a member.

A determined effort to defeat Garner for re-election to Congress was launched. The campaign against him in 1928 was obviously financed from outside the state of Texas. Whether it was the American Taxpayers League that tried to beat him is now beside the question.

Charges of election irregularities were made against Garner, and a House Elections Committee went to Texas to make an investigation. While the committee was sitting at McAllen, Representative Carl R. Chindblom, of Illinois, a Republican member of the committee, had this to say of John N. Garner:

"I am a member of the Ways and Means committee. I sit on the Republican side in this committee, and Mr. Garner sits on the Democratic side. I wish to state here that if this investigation committee should find the slightest evidence reflecting on Mr. Garner, the entire House of Representatives would be the most astounded body in the world."

As a matter of fact, the charges, which had been made against Mr. Garner by Sid Hardin, of Mission, Tex., his opponent in the Democratic primaries, fell flat when Mr. Hardin admitted he had no direct evidence. The charges were withdrawn.

Challenges Traducers

Garner said he would resign if any evidence of irregularities could be produced against him. None was produced. Meanwhile Garner was being deluged with telegrams and letters from all over the country, from Republicans and Democrats alike, all proclaiming the faith and confidence that was felt in him.

In a way, it made the Fifteenth Texas district realize that it was represented in Washington by an outstanding national figure, with hosts of friends in every part of the Union. The whole allegation against him collapsed. He won the election in triumph.

The culmination of Mr. Garner's attack on Secretary Mellon came in a remarkably clear and vigorous speech which he delivered in the House of Representatives on December 16, 1930. It is part of current history.

In this speech he declared that there was a "close bond of sympathy between corporations that have been granted tax refunds, and the Republican national organizations."

He produced figures to show that each of 17 individuals contributing $10,000 to the Republican campaign funds had been a beneficiary of the "extremely liberal policy of the United Treasury with respect to tax refunds, credits and abatements."

Shows Tax Refunds

He thereupon revealed the names of the 17 contributors to the Republican party, with the amounts of their refunds, running from several thousands of dollars to in excess of $2,000,000 each. He showed that heavy refunds of taxes had been made to the Aluminum Company of America, in which the Mellons are interested.

He disclosed that in all, during the preceding 11 years, tax refunds, credits and abatements had been made by the Treasury, principally to large corporations, in a sum amounting to nearly $3,000,000,000, and that in many of the cases refunds had been made without court decisions.

In the course of this debate it was brought out that Representative Hawley was then the chairman of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, which theoretically passed on all the refunds in excess of $75,000.

"I was one," said Mr. Garner, "who insisted that the House control that committee and its chairmanship. I made that fight, and held the matter up for three months, and it is the first time in the history of the Congress—in 25 years to my certain knowledge—when the House of Representatives has secured the chairmanship of a joint committee, and that was the result of my effort, and I am proud of it.

Votes Against Amendment

"But I say this: that under the domination of the Republican organization in this House that chairman has not functioned as I thought he would and as I think he ought to function."

As one of the results of the election which changed the control of the House of Representatives in 1931, Speaker Garner had the satisfaction of seeing a Democrat assume the chairmanship of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

The party leadership under John N. Garner was now in a position to survey in detail tax refunds from the Treasury to heavy contributors to Republican campaign funds.

Although coming from a dry district, and a dry state, Mr. Garner voted against the Eighteenth Amendment. When prohibition was finally written into the Constitution of the United States, however, he conceived it to be his duty, as a representative in Congress, to vote in favor of enforcing that part of the constitution as long as it should remain a part of it. This has been his consistent position on prohibition.

INCOME TAX RETURNS

Suggestions to Aid in Making Reports to Government

Although included in every revenue act since the act of 1924, the provision allowing a credit of 25 per cent on earned income still is subject to many misinterpretations, usually to the disadvantage of the taxpayer. It was the intention of Congress in inserting this provision that earned income—defined as "wages, salaries, professional fees and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered"—should bear a lesser tax than the income derived from sources such as investment of capital, etc.

Records of the Bureau of Internal Revenue show that many errors in the returns filed by individuals are made in connection with this 25 per cent credit. The maximum amount that may be claimed as earned income is $30,000, although the taxpayer may have earned an amount in excess of that sum. However, all net income up to $5,000, whether actually earned or not, is considered earned income for the purpose of this credit. A taxpayer who in 1931 earned a salary of $3,500 and from the sale of real estate or other business venture realized a net profit of $1,500 may treat the entire $5,000 as earned income. Following is an example of how a single person with no dependents should compute his tax on $5,000:

Net income	$5,000
Less personal exemption	1,500
Balance taxable at 1½ per cent	3,500
Normal tax of 1½ per cent on $3,500	52.50
Less 25 per cent of $52.50 earned income credit	13.13
Balance of tax payable	39.37

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly cheer and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If the bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

PILES

Piles are swollen veins which are sometimes broken in the lower end of your bowels. They may cause fistula, abscesses, ulcers and infection in the rectum. Don't let your piles run on until you must have a surgical operation. But do not treat them with harsh patent medicines, some of which require the use of hard rubber or metal tubes. For hard things should never be put into the tender rectum except upon the advice of a physician. Ask your druggist for Unguentine Rectal Cones. They bring the same blessed comfort to piles that Unguentine brings to burns and cuts. They are soft, pleasant and easy to put in. They quickly relieve the burning, bleeding, paining, itching, swelling, inflaming piles and help to prevent infection in the rectum. Ask your druggist for Unguentine Rectal Cones by name and get what you ask for.

Commons Advances Wheat Quota Plan

LONDON, March 3.—(AP.)—The House of Commons voted, 425 to 59, last night to give second readling to the government's wheat quota bill, preliminary to its passage. When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

For coughs due to colds, the best remedy that money could buy can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

COUNTY HEADS IN 'BABY BOND' DRIVE NAMED

9 Presidents of Commerce Groups to Aid Dunn in Campaign Opening Monday

Assuming active charge of the task of co-ordinating the efforts in nine counties of Western Pennsylvania for the 10-day drive to sell United States Treasury "Baby Bonds" to bring idle money back into circulation, President Thomas A. Dunn, of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, regional director of the Citizens' Reconstruction Organization, today named his county chairmen.

These nine men, all presidents of chambers of commerce and prominent business men, will in turn appoint district leaders to expedite the sale of the bonds which begins throughout the nation Monday.

LEADERS LISTED

The nine are: Armstrong County, L. G. Bonstein, Kittanning Chamber of Commerce; Beaver, E. J. Wagner, Beaver Falls Chamber of Commerce; Butler, Harry Holiday, Butler Board of Commerce; Washington, Judge J. Boyd Crumrine, Washington Chamber of Commerce; Westmoreland, Arthur F. Humphrey, Greensburg Chamber of Commerce; Fayette, G. Carl Areford, Uniontown Chamber of Commerce; Greene, John M. Patterson, Waynesburg Chamber of Commerce; Lawrence, L. G. Genkinger, New Castle Chamber of Commerce. Dunn will also serve as Allegheny County chairman.

An impressive organization has been set up in Allegheny County by Dunn. Some 90 burgesses, presidents of township commissioners and mayors have been named as local leaders to direct the sale of bonds in the various incorporated municipalities of the county. Chairman Dunn personally has communicated with the officers of 75 luncheon and service clubs and chambers of commerce and boards of trade within the county confines and secured their co-operation for the drive.

HOOVER ON RADIO

A speakers' bureau has been set up to bring the message of the campaign to the general public.

A talk by President Hoover over a nation-wide radio hookup Sunday night will sound the keynote of the campaign. In Pittsburgh on Monday night radio talks will be given from the local broadcasting stations by men prominent in the business and civic life of the city.

City detectives questioned Pegg several hours and then placed a guard over him at the hospital, pending further questioning tomorrow.

Brakes Fail, Truck Damaged in Crash

Its brakes failing to hold, according to the driver, E. J. Morris, an A. & P. grocery truck plunged down the steep Barry street hill, South Side, today. It sideswiped a National Biscuit truck, shoving it into the ditch, and piled into a telegraph pole.

GRAY FOR EVENING APPAREL STRIKES SOPHISTICATED NOTE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 3.—Lots of women are going gray this season—so far as the evening mode is concerned anyway. For this color is being used for some of the grandest frocks of the season. Perhaps gray was a demure hue once, but nowadays it seems to be used for the most sophisticated clothes, perhaps it is the very simplicity of the color that gives emphasis to the lines of the frock.

Another note of smart sartorial sophistication is to be found in the use of black with silver, always decorative and intriguing. The woman who likes clothes that are different is invariably attracted to this color scheme, which can, however, be a banal and even tawdy one, unless handled well. Large flowers are being shown here with many of the newest evening frocks, showing that the wheel of fashion certainly does revolve, bringing back with it fashions that were highlights a few seasons back. And so flowers it is again, often large shaggy blooms of the fabric of the frock, catching a scarf or making a shoulder strap.

TWO OF THE VERY newest and most attractive evening frocks of the new season are shown herewith. First comes a highly sophisticated model by Worth, done in his characteristic style. It is in crepe romain in a shadowy shade of gray and with it we show a new evening glove in matching gray suede with double pinked cuffs shirred at the wrist beneath a pert bow of suede. The bodice of the frock is draped in front and drawn up at the side to form a scarf which falls free in back. Two large flowers in gray shading to white are posed on the shoulder. Godets at each side of the skirt widen into deep rippling godets and finally merge into a curved train. The silhouette is slim.

THE LOVELY LANVIN evening frock is of black triple georgette and has a decorative accessory in the short jacket of the same material richly embroidered in silver sequins. The motif of the design is intertwined vines connecting solid leaves of the sequins in a strikingly bold pattern. The roped belt is of black georgette with sequins massed together.

The eyes have "it" after you treat them this way

CONCERNING THE EYEBROW.....
Thin, plucked eyebrows are out, girls. Shape your brows, yes. With tweezers, pluck those straggly hairs from underneath the inside of the brow and from the top line of the outer edge of the brow. Arch the brows to suit your type. Then pinch the brows to make them even and neat. Also, use a good eye cream on brows and lashes at night. But don't pluck the brows to a thin, faint line. That's discouraged by all the smartest experts I know. It's chic to look natural these days.

BRUSH, PENCIL, MASCARA.....VOILA!
Remember, please, that brushing is as healthful for your eyebrows and lashes as it is for your hair. To accentuate the brows, use an eyebrow pencil, applying it in, toward the bridge of the nose. Then moisten your eyebrow brush slightly with mascara and brush the brows first in—toward the nose, then up and out, to shape them. Use mascara on your lashes, for evening and party make-up.

HANDS UP! FOR FACIAL CLEANSING.....
Hands are the best means of washing the face, so experts insist. Use the finger-tips to work the soap lather well into the pores. Thus you avoid irritation such as a rough cloth sometimes creates. After a thorough lathering with Palmolive, rinse with warm water, then with cool...and your mirror will present a flattering, youthful picture.

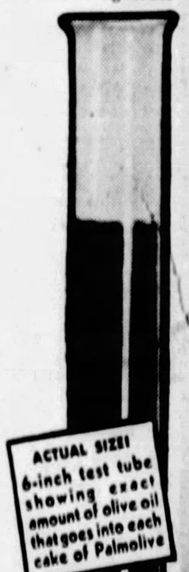
Let your eyes measure the exact amount of olive oil in each cake of Palmolive Soap. Here it is . . . in this test tube



JUST look at this test tube—you women who value complexion beauty. You who know full well the priceless cosmetic effect of olive oil. Here the camera shows you the exact amount of olive oil that goes into every cake of Palmolive. This is why women consider Palmolive as more than a soap—a priceless beauty treatment. Blended with this olive oil are oils from palm trees—just enough to give a thick, rich, workable lather. No other fats whatsoever!

Every cake marked

Do other soaps offer this? Do other soaps stamp, right on the cake, in plain letters, the re-assuring words "made of olive and palm oils"? Palmolive does! Its very color is the natural green of olive and palm oils—nothing else. No artificial coloring!

Too often soaps have a heavy scent that quarrels with the odor of your favorite perfume. But Palmolive is pure! Sweet! Naturally fragrant! Wonderfully refreshing for the bath as well as for the face!

All this explains why 20,000 beauty experts have recommended Palmolive Soap as the ideal way to keep complexions lovely. Do, please, use Palmolive if you are seriously interested in keeping your skin young, fresh, radiant!

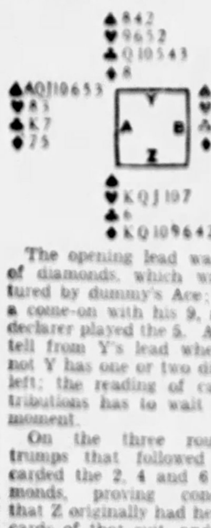
OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

How Many Tricks Can A Win?

The hand below was opened by Z with the "official" demand bid of 3-Diamonds. A overcalled with 3-Spades. Y passed. B bid 4-Spades. Z shifted into 5-Hearts, which A overcalled with 5-Spades. Coming into action, Y bid 6-Hearts. B bid 6-Spades; both Z and A passed, but Y doubled, expecting his partner to win an opening lead of diamonds, and then allow Y to trump a return lead. It is not uncommon for players to pin faith to such imaginary happening, whereas they should double upon first trick winners or trump holdings.



The opening lead was the 8 of diamonds, which was captured by dummy's Ace; Z gave a come-on with his 9, and the declarer played the 5. A cannot tell from Y's lead whether or not Y has one or two diamonds left; the reading of card distributions has to wait for the moment.

On the three rounds of trumps that followed Z discarded the 2, 4 and 6 of diamonds, proving conclusively that Z originally had held seven cards of that suit, and that Y had led a singleton. It seemed inconceivable that Z could have bid hearts so strongly unless he had five of them at least; the question concerning whether he had held a distribution of 7-6-0-0 or 7-5-1-0 could be settled readily by leading a single round of clubs.

A laid down his K of clubs; Y dropped the 3, dummy the 2 and Z played the 6. This seemed to settle that question concerning the safety of finessing dummy's J on the next lead. It was highly improbable that Y had originally held only two clubs. Even if that were true, there were four chances for Y to hold the missing Q against two chances for the finesse to lose. The declarer had done his best to locate the missing Q, and he finessed dummy's J upon the second round of clubs. The J held, and Z showed out of the suit, just as A had calculated would happen.

A led dummy's Ace of clubs, and discarded from his own hand a heart, preparatory to a squeeze attempt. It is astonishing to those who have never been accustomed to look for a possible squeeze in every difficult hand, to discover how often that unique method of picking up an extra trick or two will work.

A return lead of clubs was ruffed by the declarer. Z discarded a heart. The squeeze was put in operation, by leading three trumps. After the lead of two trumps the holdings about the table were as follows:

A put one more turn on his squeeze, by leading his last trump (never forget that vital step). Of course Y had to hold his club, and let go a heart. Dummy discarded what Y held, letting go its last club. B had either to give the declarer a diamond and dummy a heart trick, or else give dummy two hearts. A made a grand slam.

Criticism of New Play Fails to Impress Shaw

CAPETOWN, March 3.—(AP.)—George Bernard Shaw is not impressed by "the bright young American critics," who have attempted to give the "raspberry" to his new play, "Too True to Be Good." He said:

"They have said exactly what I expected and of course what they say is quite true. You will notice that the audience, although bewildered, enjoyed the play. That explains my object in writing it. The critics are saying the same old thing about my conversation. Of cours, the play has conversation. Have they ever seen a play without conversation?"

DRY WHO SHOT BOY 'DRUNK'

CHICAGO, March 3.—(AP.)—Daniel Gilday, 65-year-old reform crusader, has declared in court he "must have been intoxicated" when he shot 17-year-old Herman Knol.

Gilday took the stand at his trial on charges of assault and battery with intent to kill yesterday and told the jury he thought Knol and a companion were robbers and that the pistol he drew was fired in a scuffle accidentally.

The reformer, who is president of a South Side Law and Order League, said he drank in two places the afternoon of last November 29 before the shooting occurred, and, when questioned by the prosecution, said he did not know whether he was intoxicated, but "I must have been."

The youths have said they thought Gilday under the influence of liquor and tried to escort him home when he wounded Knol.

Mrs. Weir, wife of a Weirton Steel Company official, was accused of stealing the affections of Millsop, an assistant to the president of the company. The Millsops have patched up family differences and are living together again, court officials said.

KILLS SELF BY SLAIN HUSBAND

ROANOKE, Va., March 3.—(AP.)—While a policeman stood beside her, Mrs. Juanita Wessell, of Cincinnati, O., fired two shots into her chest last night. She died almost immediately.

The police officer who had stood with his foot on the running board of the woman's car, found inside the body of her husband, Leon C. Wessell, and "Lindy," a fox terrier, both fatally shot, apparently with the same pistol.

A few minutes before, the woman had given a pedestrian a note addressed to the "Chief of Police, Roanoke, Va." She then drove her car forward a short distance and stopped.

The note was given to an officer, who walked to the car and made inquiry of any trouble which may have occurred and offered assistance.

"I am in trouble," Mrs. Wessell said as the officer put his foot on the running board. The woman shot twice, and the policeman, opening the door, took from her hand a .25-caliber automatic.

HELD FOR BOMB, GERM PLOTS

PHILADELPHIA, March 3.—(AP.)—Additional accusations of placing of explosives in coal bins in West Philadelphia homes and threatening to mail infectious germs to a prominent coal dealer were made by police against John S. Thomson, 40, charged with cutting numerous telephone cables.

He was held in $10,000 for court after police said he planned to extort $50,000 in cash or a $3,600 a year job from the Bell Telephone Company in return for his promise to quit cutting cables. Telephone company officials estimated he had caused more than $100,000 damage over a period of several months.

Police said he was responsible for at least a dozen blasts in homes where explosives had been hidden in the coal bins and they accused him of writing letters to John U. Kunkel, head of a coal company, threatening to send germs to him in the mail and demanding payment of $3,000.

Gen. Butler Pinchot's Senate Candidate

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, March 3.—Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler is Gov. Pinchot's candidate for the United States Senate, not so much with the hope of being elected to that office, as in assisting the Governor in gaining control of the Republican party machinery in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Shields

The retired Marine officer is an excited and exciting campaigner, one given to forensics without restraint. He will stir up interest in a campaign which bids fair to be as colorless as the sex life of the oyster. His fiery tactics will rouse interest throughout the state, particularly in the interior counties, where there is considerable dry sentiment.

In behind that brush beating the Governor hopes to swing enthusiasm for candidates for state committeemen, whom he will set up in every district of the state. The activity of County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern along this line in Allegheny County is only symptomatic of a course of conduct which will be followed everywhere.

Strategy's Success Means Party Control

Should this strategy be successful the Governor will gain control of the party machinery through the vote of state committeemen, and elect as state chairman in place of Gen. Edward Martin a man willing to take orders from the administration.

If as a by-product of this enterprise Butler should be elected, he would have his reward, something in the nature of a surprise package, unexpected but welcome velvet.

But if he does not win and Pinchot gains control of the state committee, the administration immediately will get busy in setting the stage for the campaign of 1934, toward which the Governor now is really aiming. In that campaign Butler, in return for the adventure of today, would be slated as the Pinchot candidate for Governor, and the Pike County forester would be a candidate for the United States Senate seat now filled by David A. Reed.

Real Background Of Butler Candidacy

That is, as I am able to gather it from sources which are reliable, the real background of the Butler candidacy. The Governor and the General have no hope of carrying such counties as Philadelphia and Allegheny, either for the Senate or for State Committee, though they may pinch off a committeeman or two in Allegheny.

But a committeeman from a dry, country senatorial district is as important as a committeeman from a wet, city senatorial district.

Former Senator Joseph R. Grundy is in on this strategy with all the force at his command. He is expected to be for Butler and to throw all his influence to the Pinchot ambition to organize the State Committee, as he did futilely in 1930. Representative John Flynn, political leader of the Grundy faction in the Legislature, has been in frequent conference with the Governor's lieutenants, as have other Grundy aides.

Pinchot Not Planning Complete State Ticket

Mr. Pinchot is not planning a complete state ticket of opposition to the organization slate. He will not fight Auditor General Charles A. Waters, scheduled to be elected State Treasurer. But he does want to find an adequate candidate for Auditor General in succession to Waters as an opponent for Senator Frank Baldwin, organization choice. He is hoping for dissatisfaction with the organization slate for the Superior Court.

But he does not know whether he will go all the way in an attack, which can be done only by setting up a slate of delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention, with himself the bellwether of the group fighting the organization. One of his closest associates is for such an effort, hoping that will serve more forcibly to dramatize the unrest which exists, but which has no focal point.

Summed up, the controversy over candidates now raging is not so much a matter of the men now being mentioned, as it is an effort to control the party government and prepare for the bigger campaign of 1934, when not only a United States Senator, but a Governor, are to be chosen. Mr. Pinchot would like to have a hand in naming his successor.

5 MORE SWEET VOICED GIRLS CHOSEN

Happy Winners Aroused From Sleep to Hear Good News in WCAE Contest

Five lucky Monongahela Valley girls are happier today than they were yesterday because they have been named winners in the third night's auditions sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and radio station WCAE. The auditions are being held in the Alvin Theater every night this week to determine the "girl with the sweetest voice" in Pittsburgh. Notified late last night by telephone, several of the winning girls could not believe their good fortune. One girl, wakened out her sleep, said:

"Oh don't tell me. This is the first time in my life I ever won anything. It is quite a shock."

Another girl said:

"Is someone kidding me or is it really the truth? Oh, that's lovely! I certainly am glad to hear it."

WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Last night's winners were Tess Goldstein, 2718 Jenny Lind street, McKeesport (No. 20); Margaret Shultz, 7307 McClure avenue, Swissvale (No. 24); Florence R. Benswanger, 1450 Inverness street (No. 102); Adelaide Lasner, 1422 Severn street (No. 117); and Mrs. Laura Walters, 4014 Saline street (No. 186).

Miss Goldstein is 19, and graduated from Glassport High School last year. Miss Shultz is a senior in Swissvale High School. Mrs. Walters is a young mother of a 20-month-old baby, Billy.

Miss Williams

Miss Mildred Williams, of 500 North Negley avenue, one of the five East End girls who won Tuesday night's contest, announced last night she was practicing hard for the finals.

The judges last night were Mrs. Byron King, Jr., of the Byron W. King School of Oratory; J. King Morris, district traffic superintendent of the Bell Telephone Company, and James G. Fulton, of Pittsburgh, coach for the Harvard debating team in 1927. Their only criticism of last night's auditions was that the

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 3.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

It wasn't enough for the Morrow family to lose the ablest, fairest, and broadest of our public men, they had to experience this kidnaping. I am sure nothing could carry more sympathy. What a shock to everybody. But how much more of one it is when you have seen the baby, seen the affection of the mother and father, and the whole Morrow family for the cute little fellow. Two weeks ago Sunday, Mrs. Rogers and I spent the day with them. The whole family interest centered around him. He has his father's blond curly hair. Even more so than his dad's.

Will Rogers

It's almost golden and all in little curls. His face is more of his mother's. He has her eyes exactly. His mother sat on the floor in the sun parlor among all of us and played blocks with him for an hour. His dad was pitching a soft sofa pillow at him as he was toddling around and the weight of it would knock him over.

I asked Lindy if he was rehearsing him for forced landings. After about the fourth time of being knocked over he dropped of his own accord when he would see it coming. He was just stumbling and jabbering around like any kid 19 months old. He crawled up in the back of the Morrow automobile that was going to take us home, and he howled like an Indian when they dragged him out. I wish we had taken him home with us and kept him.

Yours, WILL.

LEADERS SCAN RELIEF FUND SHORTAGE

Emergency Association Ponders Appeal to Public Or Local Government

With the relief needs of Allegheny County established at from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 in excess of money already raised to carry on to March 1, 1933, the executive committee of the Allegheny County Emergency Association meets today to devise means to raise the money.

The public and the local governments may be called on to put their shoulder to the wheel in the crisis. Heads of the Emergency Association and the Welfare Fund have recognized the gravity of the rapidly increasing relief burden.

BUDGET EXCEEDED

All of the charitable agencies have been struggling with a load that has gathered weight so rapidly that they have been forced to over-reach their budgets. The Emergency Association was only designed to operate until June, but unemployment demands, instead of slumping as spring approached, have increased.

Further indication of the serious condition is seen in the increasing amount of food being distributed to children by the Board of Public Education. The food is bought by private subscription and by school funds.

Milk is ordinarily distributed to children pronounced undernourished by a school physician. Recently the number of children needing the milk has increased so rapidly that the doctors have been unable to pass on all cases. Milk is now issued on the word of principals.

8,845 DAILY AVERAGE

The daily average of children receiving milk in the schools in February was 8,845, which compares with an average of 555 children in February, 1930. The amount spent for milk will be increased as necessary by the board, it is declared.

In the elementary schools, 2,458 children are being fed daily through private subscription. In high schools, 1,250 students have been receiving their noon lunch free. Board authorities are confident that they have met the needs thus far, but are alarmed at the increasing size of the problem.

TAX FEAR HELD TRADE BARRIER

Despite present business conditions, the industrial structure of the country is fundamentally sound, due to economies, John M. Fitzgerald, of New York, vice president of the committee on public relations, eastern railroad presidents' conference, asserted today at the Pitt Business Men's luncheon, Chamber of Commerce rooms.

He added:

"What business now needs is an open road ahead and a free flow of capital. Today the flow of money is retarded by fear of confiscation through taxation, and the fear of pillage by paternalists."

Aliquippa Dwelling Damaged By Blaze

Fire early today did $1,500 damage to the home of Joseph Medici, 587 Hopewell avenue, Aliquippa. Aliquippa firemen said fire, caused by a defective flue, was confined to the rear of the two-story building. The home of Oscar Burton, 559 Hopewell street, was slightly damaged by water.

BLAST WRECKS FIVE STORES

An explosion, which wrecked the roofs of five stores and was followed by fire which caused damage estimated at $25,000 rocked the lower business district of McKeesport early today.

Two men were injured, telephone and trolley lines were down and windows in a dozen or more nearby buildings were shattered as the blast hurled fragments as far as 500 feet.

The row of one-story stores at 1312-1322 Fifth avenue, at Evans street, was left virtually a skeleton. Buildings across the street were scorched by the flames.

Peter Zenich, 50, was thrown down the steps of his home at 1315 Fifth avenue, by the force of the blast. Michael Skelley, of 507 Evans street, was knocked out of one of the stores, John Garlow's restaurant at 1320 Fifth avenue. Both were treated at McKeesport Hospital.

The blast, believed to have been caused by gas, was reported to have occurred in the Paul Grito fruit store at 1314 Fifth avenue. The other places were C. W. Sullivan's confectionery, F. M. Reed Roofing Company and a vacant store.

Patrolman Bernard Heinz reported that, having detected gas, he was pulling the police box to notify headquarters when the blast let go.

Some Questions For Questioners Of Wall Street

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

While the Senate is investigating Wall street we would also like to learn some form-fitting answers to a few loose questions.

Who yanked the rip cord on that 1929 balloon?

Why did the boys keep yelling prosperity even after their voices sounded like an opera singer going down for the third time and no boat in sight?

If the Stock Exchange is a private club why was everybody as welcome as 35 pounds of air in a flat tire?

Is there any place in this world where a man can get a license to steal?

Why did they build Wall street in back of a graveyard? And why didn't any of us pushovers take the hint?

Why did we keep on buying birdseed after the canary had flown? Why does the Senate wait three years for this investigation? And how did the Senate hear about it?

FIREMAN SAVED FROM FLAMES

Donning gas masks when notified that his brother, Walter Clawson fell 20 feet through a skylight from the second floor to the first while fighting a fire, Fire Chief Edward Clawson and several other members of the New Kensington Fire Department rushed to the rear of the Siegal's Department Store, which was damaged early today and carried the injured fireman to safety. Clawson, in the Citizen's General Hospital, New Kensington, is suffering from body injuries and lacerations of the arm, hand and face.

VARE, PINCHOT PACT SEEN ON STATE SLATE

By MARK SHIELDS

Angered at State Chairman Edward Martin and the Philadelphia Republican organization for refusing to support Judge Joseph Stadtfeld for election to the Superior Court, E. R. Crawford, McKeesport tinplate manufacturer, today said he would not accept a place on the organization slate for delegate-at-large to the Republican national convention.

Senator James J. Davis, from Washington, declared he would support Stadtfeld, but indicated he would bark the remainder of the organization ticket, on which he is a candidate to succeed himself.

Martin and the Philadelphians angered and amazed Pittsburghers yesterday by throwing Stadtfeld overboard and slating Judge Robert Gawthrop, former Lieut. Gov. Arthur James and Judge William M. Parker, of Venango County, for three places on the Superior Court.

AGREEMENT FAILS

Developments during the conference made it certain that Gov. Pinchot and the Philadelphians had entered into an agreement when Parker was appointed to the Superior Court and Judge William B. Linn was promoted to the Supreme Court. At the Philadelphia conference last week when Crawford, County Chairman William D. Mansfield and Walter A. Bonitz, Pittsburgh manufacturer, believed they had secured an agreement to support Stadtfeld, they appeared to have talked to leaders who did not know how well cemented was the agreement between Pinchot and William S. Vare. This agreement paid no heed whatever to the candidacy of Judge Stadtfeld.

In Pittsburgh today conferences are proceeding in an effort to form a complete opposition ticket to the organization slate, rallying behind Gen. Smedley Butler, dry candidate for the Senate, who was brought into the field yesterday by Gov. Pinchot.

Ralph Flinn, son of the late Senator William Flinn, is being urged by County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, Allegheny County Pinchot leader, to be a candidate for Auditor General against Senator Frank Baldwin, of Potter County. Flinn has not yet reached a decision.

SEEK COMPLETE TICKET

The Pinchot-McGovern contingent is seeking a complete ticket, which may include candidates for delegate-at-large to the national convention, and certainly will include district delegates, state committeemen and county committeemen. Difficulty is being encountered in bringing unified support behind such a ticket, which would include Parker and Gawthrop, with Stadtfeld substituted for James.

Some Allegheny countians were anxious to support Stadtfeld, but in view of the Pinchot-Vare agreement which sidetracked the local jurist, they were lukewarm toward backing any other Pinchot entries.

State Chairman Martin also was bearing the burden of blame for the shelving of Stadtfeld by the organization. Martin up until announcement of the slate late yesterday had been spreading optimism among friends of Stadtfeld.

At the Governor's office in Harrisburg, however, there was at all times an assurance that Parker rather than Stadtfeld would be slated by the organization, the administration apparently having information about the deal with Vare which was unknown to some organization leaders.

Martin in announcing the slate said it was felt by the state or-

Allied Boards Suggest Action by City Council; Ask Company Statement

City Council was in receipt of a suggestion today from the Allied Boards of Trade recommending that before deciding upon the 10 cents a month electric and less than 5-cent bus fare reductions submitted by the Philadelphia Company, a request be made for a statement of valuations to be studied by a special committee.

Citing "the faith that Frank R. Phillips professes to have in Pittsburgh" as grounds to believe the utility company president should be agreeable to such a request, the communication suggested:

"To avoid the expense and delay attendant upon a rate case before the Public Service Commission, invite the Philadelphia Company to submit a statement of valuations upon which their rate structure is predicated, as prescribed by the Public Service Commission — giving those values as of the last available date before the depression, and also the present values, so as to clearly reflect the marking down from the high peak. This to be subject to examination by a committee of engineers, accountants and attorneys, with a view of arriving at the fairness of the figures from the standpoint of the utilities as well as the public."

Fred Favo, of Oakmont, today was announced as chairman of the Forty-fourth Senatorial District committee of the Pennsylvania Fair Rate Association by President A. B. Davidson, of Tarentum.

UTILITY PROBE FUNDS CUT

WASHINGTON, March 3.—(AP.)—Like most other functions of the government, the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of public utilities in Pennsylvania and elsewhere will be affected by the drive for economy.

The Democratic - controlled House Appropriations Committee pared $460,000 from the commission's request and provided only $1,236,500 for expenses of the commission in the next fiscal year. That amount is the same as allowed by the Budget Bureau.

Otis B. Johnson, secretary of the commission, complained against the reduction, saying inquiries into the financial structure of various electric and other utilities as well as operations of chain stores "will be practically stopped."

PROGRAM MAKES HIT

As on the preceding night the popular Riggs and Moke walked away with the show. And there was the dainty Helene Ward pleasing the audience with her "blues" numbers. More than a score of other artists performed.

Among them were Charlotte Shallenberger, Atwater-Kent audition winner; Dave Levin, WCAE maestro; Ford Miller, WCAE announcer, who was master of ceremonies; David Olson, WCAE's Seth Parker, who was partial to the chorus blondes; WCAE's Novelty trio with Ralph Federer, pianist; Kathryn Rickert, violinist, and Alyce Martin, 'cello; Ray Griffin, bass; Paul Gannon, tenor; Virginia Harmon, soprano; the Lawson Sisters, harmony team; Stephanie Diamond, songs; Frank Vitale, master of strings; Ann Zimet, blues singer; Leota and Jean, song and dance team; Sonny Joy, comic songs, and others.

Tonight, auditions will be given to Allegheny Valley girls including residents of Sharpsburg, Etna, Millvale, North Side, Cheswick, Oakmont, Springdale, Tarentum, New Kensington, Arnold, Aspinwall, West View, Blawnox, Harmarville, Brackenridge, Natrona, Harwick, Creighton and Parnassus.

York, Hero of War, Dodges Reception

ROME, Ga., March 3.—(AP.)—Sergt. Alvin C. York, World War hero, who captured a German machine gun nest, shied yesterday at meeting a civic welcoming delegation.

High officials of the town and county and other prominent citizens lined up at the city limits to welcome a motorcade of highway boosters that included the Sergeant. There was to be much speech-making, exchange of greetings and such, and it was presumed the Sergeant would do his share of both. He took one look at the crowd, however, drove his automobile past the greeters and hurried out of town without even stopping.

SHORT WEIGHTS BRING FINE

Pleading guilty to two violations of the state weights and measures laws, J. A. Smeaton, manager of the Luzerne Mercantile Company store, subsidiary of the Wheeling Steel Corporation, Harmarville, was fined $50 and costs amounting to $11.90, by Justice of the Peace Edward F. Kapteina, of Springdale, yesterday.

The informations made by Inspectors A. L. Cotton and Henry Huck, of the County Bureau of Weights and Measures, specify that bags of navy beans represented to weigh three pounds, were short four ounces and that the weights of the contents were not marked on the bags, according to the state law.

Smeaton told the Justice:

"The beans were not on sale, but distributed through the company relief. The store charged the company 18 cents for three pounds. We are short of help and it is an awful job to be exact."

Smeaton paid $61.90.

ganization that it "can best serve the people of Pennsylvania" by rallying around the men named. He said that Bonitz and Senator James J. Coyne, who were in Harrisburg yesterday conferring with the state leaders, made a strong fight for Stadtfeld, but were turned down. Both will support the local jurist, Martin said, adding that Senator John J. McClure, of Delaware County, candidate for delegate-at-large in place of A. W. Mellon, who withdrew, would back Judge Albert Dutton MacDade, of Delaware County.

Mansfield, ill at his home in McKeesport, was unable to attend the Harrisburg meeting.

Martin caused a smile among newspapermen and politicians when he said that the loyalty of Allegheny County in the past led him to believe it would support all the ticket but Stadtfeld. In 1930 it was alleged treason to the state organization and Philadelphia in Allegheny County, which defeated the Philadelphia candidate for governor, Francis Shunk Brown, and which was in part responsible for the scant consideration given this county in this year's slate making.

THE SLATE

The slate as announced by Martin follows:

Justice William B. Linn, Philadelphia, for Supreme Court; Judges Robert S. Gawthorp, West Chester, and William M. Parker, Oil City, and Arthur H. James, Plymouth, for Superior Court; Senator James J. Pay Cut May Save Chicago Orchestra

CHICAGO, March 3.—(AP.)—A possibility that the Chicago Symphony Orchestra would not suspend all activities at the end of the present season was seen today after Charles H. Hamill, president, said that if the musicians accepted a new wage agreement the association might be able to continue.

The action of the management in announcing discontinuance of all concerts at the end of the season automatically canceled, Hamill said, the existing wage agreement. The management is now in a position to negotiate a new contract at a lower scale, Hamill pointed out.

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC is 3 times as powerful as other leading mouth washes. That's economy for you! Why waste money on antiseptics that must be used full strength to be effective?

WE stress the great economy of Pepsodent Antiseptic because it convincingly proves Pepsodent Antiseptic's unique germ-killing power. When fighting colds, irritated throat and Bad Breath (Halitosis), remember there are really only two leading kinds of antiseptics. On the one hand you have the mouth wash that must be used full strength to be effective. On the other hand you have Pepsodent Antiseptic—utterly safe when used full strength, yet powerful enough to be diluted with two parts of water and still be effective! Pepsodent Antiseptic is at least three times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes three times as far—gives you three times as much for your money—and gives you extra protection against stubborn colds, and throat irritations. When choosing your mouth antiseptic, be sure you choose the one that kills the germs even when diluted with water! Insist on Pepsodent Antiseptic—and be safe! Be safe—and save money!

BAD BREATH (Halitosis)

The amazing results of Pepsodent Antiseptic in fighting colds and sore throat prove its effectiveness in checking Bad Breath (Halitosis). Remember, Pepsodent Antiseptic is 3 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics. Remember, it kills germs even when diluted with water!

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- -:- Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day -:- -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Gayety Should Be Mixed With Desire for Great Things

She wants the "Real Stuff of Life," so when her young friends come romping around and try to drag her off to make whoopee, she waves them all away with contemptuous sniffs.

"Dance?" she snorts. "Go to parties? Meet other young people? What for? All that sort of thing is a mere waste of time. There's nothing to it. It is only a foolish illusion. Why should I bother with it? My life is dedicated to better things!"

From which you might gather that our heroine is having a perfectly dandy time sitting alone with her noble thoughts; but such is not the case. As a matter of fact, as each day passes, she's wallowing deeper and deeper in gloom.

Something must be wrong! Is it possible that this search for the "Real Stuff of Life" is going to prove a wet smack? It's quite possible!

DECLINES INVITATIONS

"Dear Sally Martin:

"Let me have your point of view on this subject, please.

"I am a girl of 18. I love music and have promised to make good at it—to see it to a finish—and so far I have succeeded. Not all my time is spent on music, however. I also enjoy good literature, and spend a good deal of time in reading.

"In other words, I am trying to enrich my soul and body, to rise above the obstacles of ignorance. I am forever striving to do the right and just thing, to live a clean and decent life and to cherish the essence of life, though inevitable hazards upon life's journey are impending.

"I do not care for dances or parties, but my girl friends are forever urging me to attend them. They usually finish with 'Oh, you'll have a good time! You don't know any boys and not many girls, but when you do you'll have a great time!'

"I decline these invitations because to me they seem so petty. I can see no real happiness in chasing illusions. To me they seem to be mere tinsel. I want the real stuff out of life.

"I do not resent the good times of others, but I want them to leave me alone.

HAS SET STANDARD

"Then, again, I sometimes think: 'Here I am laboring for what seems so far away. When I do reach my goal, my youth will be spent. Will the renown outweigh the years of hard work? Will I feel I've missed something?' These are the thoughts I have when I'm blue.

"But I live down these moods, work harder than ever and feel that it is my life I must live; for I have set my standard and I shall adhere to it, though I realize it will be a long, rough and weary road, traveled only by those who have the patience and the willingness to succeed, no matter what obstacles block the path.

"Other girls cannot see my point of view. They think I'm silly to live as I do. But do you? "JEANITA."

Do I think you're silly to shut yourself off from the world? Yep. Queer as it may seem to you, kid, I do.

Hard work, earnest study, are fine things. None of us can get far without them. But the old saw "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," isn't just a saw. There's a lot of good hard truth in it.

You can't truly "enrich" either your soul or your body if you shut yourself up in the tiny, restricted cell of your own being, and scorn the rest of the world as "petty," or look on healthy fun as an "illusion."

SECRET COWARDICE

Even your music will fall short of real bigness if you do that. God made laughter, just as He put the sheen on a butterfly's wing or the scent in a sweet pea. He made friendship. He intended your life to know and grow with other lives.

And you'll never find real wisdom, or strength, or happiness, or beauty, until you realize that, and snap out of your snootiness.

Make no mistake, youngster, there is more Real Stuff in any of those lives around you, even if they're stupid, silly lives, than there is in all the "literature" on earth, if you're smart enough to find it!

I suspect there's a secret cowardice behind your refusal to meet those other lives. You're just a little bit afraid to step out and compete with them in the open arena of reality, but you won't admit it, even to yourself.

So you hide behind a screen of snootiness and criticism, and pretend to yourself and your friends that you think their young joy is cheap and stupid, and quite beneath your nature.

Stop fooling yourself, Jeanita! You'll be a mighty one-sided, bitter and disappointed woman some day, unless you mix a little regular living with your thirst for big things.

Grim Humor of Most Practical Jokes Is Cruelty, Fay King Warns

IT WAS MONTHS BEFORE SHE RECOVERED FROM THE CRUEL PRACTICAL JOKE OF HER HUSBAND'S PALS!
THE SURPRISE OF HIS RETURN WHEN SHE HAD THOUGHT HIM KILLED IN THE WAR MADE HER TEMPORARILY INSANE
ALWAYS PREPARE THE AGED FOR YOUR UNEXPECTED VISIT, ESPECIALLY AFTER YEARS OF ABSENCE
FAY KING

By FAY KING

To my mind there is much akin between the practical joker and the criminally insane.

The grim humor of nearly all practical pokes is cruelty, and cruelty is one of the first signs of vicious insanity.

Many brilliant persons take delight in practical jokes. But many brilliant persons have also committed atrocious crimes.

The more brilliant the person the more patience and cunning he will spend in perfecting his crime or his practical joke.

A practical joker spent a long time bandaging a drunken pal, then sprinkled him with ketchup to look like blood. The wife was sent for and told her husband was fatally injured. This "joke" so well "played" made her ill for months.

Sudden surprises planned in thoughtless kindness are also dangerous.

Heart of a Wife -:- -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Dicky Happy When Madge Assures Him of Her Love

There was a poignancy of anxiety in Dicky's voice which suddenly made me almost wish that I never had yielded to the ambition to write a play. A hidden dream of mine for years, the prospect of the success which had been mine since Philip Veritzen had tentatively accepted my drama had given me the heady, triumphant thrill which only the success of creative work can give.

But, if Dicky should be right, if the price of success should be a rift in our domestic harmony, then that price would be too much to pay. For the second time since Philip Veritzen had called for the third act of my play, I made a gesture of renunciation. But this one was born of love for my husband and the desire to preserve our happiness intact instead of an emotion composed equally of anger and bluff, which had prompted my other proposal.

He was leaning forward, with his hand still covering mine across the table. I twisted mine under his and gripped them tightly.

"See here," I said tensely. "Nothing's worth the possibility of this coming between us. If you really fear that this play of mine, with all it entails, will make us drift away from each other, then I never want to finish it. Tear up what I have written and tell Mr. Veritzen that I have decided not to submit the play."

"What kind of a Gadarene swine do you think your husband is?" he demanded. "What sort of a boob do you think I'd appear in later years explaining to Junior and Faith, as I'd have to, that their mother sacrificed a brilliant career because their father wasn't big enough to cope wisely and unselfishly with an unusual situation?"

"Nevertheless," I said steadily, "I think I ought to destroy the manuscript."

Into Dicky's eyes came a gleam familiar to me. It is one which comes there when, despairing of gaining his point by ordinary means, he resorts to whimsical thrusts.

"Look here, my lady," he said, "I never have exercised the English marital right of chastising you with a stick no thicker than my thumb, but by the Lord Harry, if you dare to lay an irreverent hand upon that play, you will eye me with respect for years to come."

"But, Dicky," I insisted, though weakly.

"Neither 'and nor but.' I mean it," he quoted with a grin, then his voice sobered and he looked at me with earnest eyes in which there was no mirth.

"I'll cut out the joking, old dear, if you will can the captious conscience. It's all very well to say all the things we both have been dealing off our chests for the last ten minutes, but you know as well as I do that there is no going back over this particular track. You're slated for literary success with a big L and a big S, and it's up to me to help you, and quit beefing about something that probably never will happen and giving up your career wouldn't help if it did.

"Forget what I said, honey," he pleaded. "I was talking through my old straw hat, anyway. After all, there is just one acid test to apply to it all. Is our love great enough to stand unusual conditions? I'm shouting sure, mine is. How about yours?"

"I'll vouch for mine," I said quietly, and Dicky pressed my hands so tightly that my fingers tingled from his clasp for many minutes afterwards.

"Then, suppose we agree to cut out this foolishness forevermore," Dicky said. "Let's take it as a matter of course, all in a day's work."

"I'm willing," I rejoined, just as Katie knocked at the door, putting an effectual end to the discussion, with the Peach Melba which she had had such difficulty in describing.

Tacitly, neither of us spoke again of the play until we had discussed the dessert and Katie had cleared away everything. Then Dicky lit his after-dinner cigar and asked tentatively: "Shall we go on with the revision now, or wait for Lillian?"

"Oh, wait for Lillian by all means," I said. "She sat up all night and typed this third act for me."

"And as a reward, we'll let her sit up another night and work some more," Dicky gibed, but there was no malice in the jest, and I laughed both with him and at him.

It was not very long until Lillian appeared, and we three set to work in earnest, checking up on my revision, I passing each page first to Dicky for his verdict and then to Lillian. I found that there were surprisingly few changes to be made and when the last page was laid down before me, I had the welcome assurance that when copied by an expert typist it would be mechanically perfect. My fingers trembled a bit as I put the last pages in order, and I saw Dicky and Lillian look at me keenly.

"All set, aren't we?" Dicky asked.

"Yes, it's finished," I said, and Lillian clapped me on the shoulder.

"Good girl! You've done it," she said.

"What's the next thing on the program?" Dickey stepped forward and picked up the manuscript. "This goes to the typist the first thing in the morning. He guarantees to have an original and two copies here before eleven. That's the hour scheduled, is it not?"

"Yes, and then what?" Lillian persisted.

It was not like her to cross-examine anyone so closely.

Household Hints

Scorch stains on white silk can be removed by applying bicarbonate of soda mixed to a paste with cold water.

Soak burned saucepans or baking dishes in cold water with a liberal amount of common salt for a few hours, and they will clean easily without harming the surface.

There is nothing like rice water for giving a gloss to black silk articles and garments. After washing the silk, place it in the rice water, remove without wringing, and press with a moderately hot iron.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Graduation Present

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Who goes through a revolving door first, the man or the woman?

2. What would be a fitting high school graduation present from a boy to a girl, when the friendship has been of quite long standing? B. M.

1. The man should stand at the right of the woman, and, as she enters the compartment of the revolving door, he pushes the near edge of the door, to get it started, so that it will be easier for the woman to continue the swing of the door.

If the door is already in motion, the man helps the woman to enter the compartment, by putting his hand under her elbow.

So, in either case, the woman enters first.

2. The most appropriate present of all is the corsage of flowers or the box of flowers sent by the young man as a graduation tribute to a girl graduate. For 'tis true that the girl graduate, like the debutante, more or less judges her popularity by the number of floral tributes sent her on her graduation day.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Rheumatoid Arthritis May End in Disability

Rheumatoid arthritis is a chronic disease that attacks the joints. It is followed by a marked tendency to permanent stiffness and deformity of the affected parts.

Dr. Copeland

The cause is supposed to be an infection, but the most careful research often fails to locate the exciting cause. Heredity may possibly enter into the problem in some cases.

There is no doubt that poor health from any cause has a powerful influence upon the tendency to develop this disease. Young adults—even children—as well as the old and those of middle life, are liable to suffer from the malady.

Sometimes influenza, pneumonia or meningitis may precipitate the attack. More commonly chronic infections of the teeth, tonsils, nose, throat, gums, middle ear, gall bladder or appendix may be found to be responsible.

The food we eat is changed into products useful for the needs of the body, and the waste substances are eliminated. In general terms, this balanced process is referred to as the "metabolism" of the body. Anything that interferes with this balance is often associated with joint disturbances. The thyroid and other of the glands have also been under suspicion as factors in arthritis.

The onset of the disease may be sudden. Several joints may become swollen, painful and sometimes slightly reddened. The hands and feet are particularly likely to suffer and sometimes the larger joints of the knees or elbows are involved. Occasionally the spine, especially in the region of the neck, is attacked.

The pulse is increased in rate, even after the acute symptoms have subsided. The involved joint usually remains stiff and the muscles are likely to waste. After a longer or shorter period, there remains permanent disability of the affected part.

At times the involved joints seem to become practically normal. They remain so until later attacks cause permanent deformity and disability.

Rheumatoid arthritis has been widely studied by scientists, but so far no universal cure has been discovered.

The first step is to discover and do away with all areas of infection. When the joints have not yet been seriously involved this procedure may have a happy effect; but where deformity and loss of function are present, I am sorry to say, no treatment can restore the joints to a normal state.

Diet may effect some improvement. Limiting the meats and starches and taking a liberal supply of cream, milk and cod liver oil are measures which have improved the condition of many a patient.

LISTENING IN—With the Radio Editor

FOUR OF ZIEGFELD'S most beautiful show girls entertain WCAE listeners with lively backstage gossip at 6:15 o'clock tonight.

In a special program arranged by the Sun-Telegraph, Marjorie Levoe, Neva Lynn, Dorothy Flood and Alice Burrage are going to tell all about "Hot-Cha," the current Ziegfeld success now in its second week at the Nixon here, and how they are looking forward to the spectacular Broadway opening next Tuesday night. They also intend to reveal how they keep in trim; how they live and other stage secrets little known beyond the footlights.

Miss Levoe

Miss Levoe, Miss Lynn and Miss Flood have appeared in motion pictures, while Miss Burrage has several other stage successes to her credit.

George Seibel, dramatic and literary editor of the Sun-Telegraph, branches out on the networks tomorrow night at 5 o'clock. Mr. Seibel, who discusses "Plays and Players" over WCAE each Tuesday night and "The World of Books" each Sunday night as a regular Sun-Telegraph feature, is visiting in New York and has been invited by NBC executives to speak in the chain broadcast, which will include WCAE.

Program Pointers

Henry, the KQV janitor, gets all mixed up in a broadcasting station tonight at 8:30 in KQV's "Adventures of Henry" series.

The Alfred Kendall Players present another mystery play on WWSW at 10:45. Incidentally, it is a real "mystery" program, for the cast is kept a secret and the title of the play is not revealed until it begins. But it is no secret, though, that Walter Framer directs and Alfred L. Goldberg is author of the scripts.

Russell Bennett's orchestra again is a WCAE bright spot at 8, in the absence of Rudy Vallee, with Ray Perkins as master of ceremonies and Amy Goldsmith, soprano; Alma Kitchell, contralto, and the Albertina Rasch dancing girls as guest artists.

P. M. Chappell is guest speaker on the Rin Tin Tin Thriller anniversary program on KDKA at 8:15.

If you like real singing (and who doesn't?) try Aileen Stanley, on KDKA at 8:30, and Irene Beasley, on WJAS at 9:15.

Baroness Nostitz von Hindenburg, niece of the President of the German Republic, and a well-known writer and authority on Rodin, is interviewed in the Bath Club program on WJAS at 8.

Jouett Shouse, chairman of the executive committee of the National Democratic Committee, is Walter Winchell's guest tonight. The "magic carpet" brings Luigi Romanelli and his orchestra from Toronto, and the Coon-Sanders Orchestra from the New Yorker.

Don Bestor plays his own song, "Gee, but I Hate to Say Good-Night," on the air for the first time tomorrow night.

Buddy Rogers, here with Ziegfeld's "Hot-Cha," gets that New York hotel job when Rudy Vallee goes on tour with George White's "Scandals" March 28. But Rudy will continue his Thursday night radio programs from the different cities en route.

Question Box

How long have the Eskimos been broadcasting and who is their leader?—Ruth K., Heidelburg.

The orchestra of the Eskimo Night Club, with Harry Reser as leader, recently inaugurated its seventh year on an NBC network, making it one of the oldest radio features in point of continuous programs.

Studio Static

Ben Alley, CBS tenor, returned the other night from Sing Sing Prison, where he and other radio artists had entertained. Mildred Hunt, who was unable to go because of a previous engagement, asked Ben if the show was a success. To which Ben replied:

"It was great. In fact, it was a complete cell-out."

Fan Fare

HARRY HARRIS, guest artist of the State Federation of Music Clubs on KDKA this afternoon, is a protege of Fred Lissfelt, Sun-Telegraph music critic. . . . Mr. Lissfelt lectures while Mr. Harris illustrates with piano solos. . . . Barbara Gould, who returns to the air on WJAS today, is coming to Pittsburgh shortly to give beauty advice. Edward Davies, NBC baritone, has five bulldogs. . . . Welcome Lewis is the only soloist featured on both NBC and CBS networks . . . A San Diego (Cal.) woman wrote Jack and Tony, KQV's blue chasers, that she hears them every once in a while when there is snow on the mountains.

Mr. Harris

Mrs. Laura C. Bolton, who, with her husband, has led two African exploration parties, entertained the Sun-Tele Family yesterday by playing a native musical instrument, singing several African songs in the native dialects and the telling folklore. The musical instrument is the mbira.

Meeting the Test

PEACE OF MIND, with which to face the present and plan for the future, never has meant more than it means today. These are trying times. It is difficult to believe that anyone has escaped the effects of a world-wide deflation of values, contraction of enterprise, social change.

That life insurance companies, during the past year, have been able to show an increase of insurance in force is indeed a tribute to the high purpose which these institutions serve. It indicates a growing national consciousness of this reliable form of financial protection.

Life insurance is, in a real sense, an investment in peace of mind, with interest payable in future comfort. It paves the way to education; to replacement of earning power cut off by death; to establishment of credit; to liquidation of indebtedness; to estate creation—to these and other family or business objectives.

Metropolitan Life Insurance policyholders, representing about one-fifth of the populations of United States and Canada, should derive deep satisfaction from the accompanying statements of their Company. It must hearten them to realize how sound their life insurance protection continues to be.

By GEORGE SEIBEL

NEW YORK, March 3.

This is Theater Guild Week, and the Guild seems to be celebrating St. Patrick nearly three weeks ahead of his day. A play by one Irish playwright, Denis Johnston, was produced here at the Guild Theater; another play by another Irish playwright, a young man named Bernard Shaw, had its premiere in Boston. Both authors, it seems, have kissed the famous Blarney Stone, but the slimy critics, probably cowed by the broadside of Congressman Sirovich in Washington, have been only mildly denunciatory.

George Seibel

Certainly "The Moon in the Yellow River," the Johnston drama, whose premiere I attended, is open to devastating satire. One of the characters says Ireland is "not a nation, but a debating society," and the same thing might be said of the play. But it is redeemed by some very fine acting, especially that of Claude Rains and Alma Kruger, a Pittsburgh girl.

Alma Kruger, born on the North Side, was once leading woman for Louis James and E. H. Sothern. For years past she has been a mainstay of Eva Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Company. She plays a maiden aunt in the new drama; a sort of Hibernian Cassandra who keeps her bicycle in her bedroom and holds a roller-skating championship.

MYSTICISM AND GAB

Enough has been said to indicate it's an odd play. But there's a fine idea at the heart of it. Though the scene is laid in Ireland, it might be anywhere that so-called Progress is defacing the landscape with machinery.

Some Irish revolutionists decide that they will "make one corner of the globe safe for humanity."

So they are going to blow up the power plant erected by a German engineer, well played by Egon Brecher.

For this they are going to use a cannon made by a queer old genius, but in the second act it won't go off. Just temperamental or tired! In the third act it reforms and does blow up the power house. But not before a commandant has shot and killed the leader of the rebels who want to wreck the machinery. He kills him, seemingly, because something has to happen after so much talk. One is sorry to see Henry Hull killed off thus ruthlessly, because he was a very poetic rebel as well as a gabby one.

MAN VERSUS MACHINE

From this it will be plain that the play is about the conflict between man and the machine. It's the philosophy of the old Luddites who marched from factory to factory smashing the looms that had put them out of work. It would appeal to thousands in this present age of unemployment.

But the principal character has hardly anything to do with this action. He is an old philosopher, embittered by the death of his wife at the birth of his daughter. His commentaries are sometimes ironic, sometimes mystical, always argumentative. The author of the play is a Dublin lawyer, which explains much. He wanders far afield, and even quotes two lines from Schiller—beside the river Shannon, which is the "yellow river" where the moon is drowned in the mud stirred up by the factory.

SHAW IN BOSTON

Meanwhile Bernard Shaw was producing the other Guild play in Boston—where they have a monument to Shaw, though it's another Shaw. But the author of "Too True to Be Good" is the same old Shaw, full of ideas which he clothes in dialogue and presents as the people of his drama.

It is a little hard to find the drama, and a sick Bacillus at the end of Act One says:

"The play is now virtually over, but the characters will continue to discuss it for two more acts."

Beatrice Lillie and Hope Williams are both in this new Shavian drama, in which a preacher who is a burglar or a burglar who is a preacher, has the task of starting the action. Shaw, as usual, makes fun of himself, and at the close the burglar-parson says:

"I must preach, preach, preach—even when I have nothing to say."

Holmes and Anita Page In Night Court

Phillips Holmes and Anita Page will have the leading roles in "Night Court," a story by Mark Hellinger and Charles Beahan. Other members of the cast so far selected include Walter Huston and Lewis Stone. W. S. Van Dyke is directing.

Lupe Velez Now Is in 'Hot-Cha'

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The looked-for event of the final days of "Hot-Cha" in the Nixon, the appearance of Lupe Velez in the role of the Mexican siren, Conchita, occurred at yesterday afternoon's performance of the latest Ziegfeld musical success, which will have its metropolitan premiere in the Ziegfeld Theater, New York, next Tuesday.

She made a hit. The little girl from Mexico City, whom the American public first became acquainted with as the leading woman for Douglas Fairbanks in "The Gaucho" and has since become typified in our minds as the personification of fiery, vivid character, here achieved the goal of feminine ambition, as far as the stage is concerned, that of appearing in a featured role in a Ziegfeld production.

Her first entrance was marked by a momentary hush, and then the audience burst into a wave of applause as it was realized that Miss Velez was at last on the stage. The incarnadine personality of the little Mexican "wild woman," Conchita, was suggested in a gown of bright crimson that set off most effectively the brunette beauty of the active Lupe. Other gorgeous creations of the modiste were worn by her in later scenes.

For the opening Miss Velez had not only the "Conchita" song, but also the "Say, What I Wanna Hear You Say" duet with Buddy Rogers, heretofore sung by Miss June Knight. Miss Velez sang pleasingly, danced prettily and in every way gave evidence that she is well fitted for the part she portrays.

Hearst Reel Shows Air Attack

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Some of the most amazing war scenes ever filmed—the actual bombardment from the air of Chapei—are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, being seen in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters, with a graphic description by the Globe Trotter. The scenes, realistic, terrifying, impressive, show explosion after explosion as the deadly missiles drop from the Japanese airplanes over the unprotected area. Sheets of flame shoot up from the North Station and other principal buildings, followed by the roar of the bursting shells. Closeups show the buildings seething furnaces. The North Station tower is a blazing pinnacle. Terror-stricken thousands flee from the streets. At Garden Bridge, leading to the International Settlement, panic-stricken Chinese jam the roadway.

RACING OVER THE SANDS

Fifteen teams, representing Germany, Holland, Italy, Austria, Canada and the United States are shown as they start the six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden, New York. Not long after the start the 10,000 fans present go wild as the riders sprint to grab extra prize money.

As an indication that spring is not far off the Coast Guard cutter Kickapoo starts clearing the channel of ice at the mouth of the Penobscot River, in Maine.

CAVALRY SHOWS OFF

Cavalry from Fort Brown, Texas, show their fearlessness during maneuvers by plunging their mounts into a deep river in order to make a surprise attack on an imaginary enemy.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, (Dem.), of New York, delivers a statement at Washington, D. C., praising the nationwide essay contest on George Washington's farewell address now being conducted by the Hearst newspapers.

"This is a commendable and patriotic undertaking," he says. "It is vital for America to have these principles, for which Washington labored in his lifetime, written indelibly on the minds of the next generation."

In celebration of leap year, the Chamber of Commerce and the Mayor of Aurora, Ill., turn over the reins of city government to the women of the town for 24 hours.

Ben Lyon Offered Hero Role in Police Yarn, 'The Radio Patrol'

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, by King Features Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, March 3.

The air mails are winging eastward with a script for Ben Lyon to read. It is Universal's "The Radio Patrol," and Carl Laemmle wants Ben to play the masculine lead.

With headlines in Los Angeles dailies proclaiming the efficient work of radio car officers, with New York newly establishing this latest kink in crime prevention and with police departments all over the country taking up the good work, Universal officials believe that Tom Reed has written an important and timely story. They are going to produce the picture with a cast which already includes Mae Clarke, Andy Devine and Russell Hopton.

Ben Lyon

In Ben's absence, Universal is conducting negotiations by wire. The story will be ready to start by the time Ben finishes his personal appearance week in Washington and returns to Hollywood. I don't have to tell you that Bebe Daniels also went East to sing on the radio. She and Ben will return together.

TOWN GOSSIP

John Farrow writes from England that he's doing scenarios for the Associated Radio Pictures studio at Eling Green. Corinne Griffith's acting there and Rowland V. Lee is an associate producer . . . The Los Angeles papers carried full stories the other day about the Shanghai experiences of two film men, Joe Rock and Sammy Weisenthal. What didn't come out was that the pair have five valuable reels of war-zone film. They're New York bound now to market it . . . Unusual sight: Four seagulls following a garbage wagon down a Hollywood side street . . . Ricardo Cortez and George O'Brien are leaving for a short vacation in the East. And will someone in New York ask Sue Carol about a rumored visit of the stork to her and Nick Stuart. One of my better informants in Hollywood says it's true . . . Democratic star: Saw Frances Dee having lunch with an extra man.

ABOUT DOROTHY JORDAN

Dorothy Jordan's stay at R. K. O. will be prolonged. David Selznick liked her so well in "The Lost Squadron" that he has persuaded M. G. M. to lend her to him again for "The Roadhouse Murder." If you follow your Hollywood closely, you recall that Arline Judge was supposed to have had this role. Instead, she will play in Constance Bennett's picture at Radio. So there's no hard feelings.

So Goes It

Now you go on to new and fairer fields
And I go back to solitude again;
A beaten lad who finds that romance yields
A maximum of heartbreak and of pain;
Nor will I try again to storm your heart
With magic vows that I can never keep.
Far better, dear, for us to stay apart
Than wake a weary bow-boy from his sleep.

And in the course of time your lips will be Forgotten fruit—your memory will stir
No knife in me—nor will I crave to see
The one-time Human Being that you were!

And, as for me—you'll tell the newest lad
About a harmless interlude you had.

—The Melancholy Don Wahn.

Haw!

Benjamin P. Holzman, exploiter for George White's "Scandals," relates the one about Nick Young, drama defender for the Boston American, which is a good paper, too. Mr. Young, it appears, is very fond of old cheese. The manager of a new show playing Boston knew this and sent to Canada for a special sort of cheese to present to the critic. The cheese arrived and was forwarded to the playheckler at his paper.

That night he had to cover the newest play, so in his haste he put the cheese in his coat pocket, put on his overcoat and went to his aisle pew. It was a pretty warm evening, and in the natural course of events, the patrons near Young began to smell the nostril-annoyer.

Finally, one of the customers, who couldn't stand it any longer, inquired in a loud voice:

"What on earth is that awful odor?"

And the critic innocently replied:

"I'm afraid it must be the show!"

I Give Up

A Form of Criticism

And Lee Wahl says that he sees in the papers that the police cars are now equipped with radios.

"Huh," says Lee, "when those in the speakeasies are just as good!"

By Way of Report

Jane Pettigrew, of the Hotel Detroiter, Detroit, is among the many who have written along these lines:

"Why not make good your threat and disclose the name of the ham actor (star?) who got the girl discharged and then she committed suicide. That's a long time ago. How about it?"

He still is in the show. And to mention his name would probably result in a suit for "defamation of character," which would easily be won by him, considering that the company manager and others who know it to be a fact, are afraid now—and are reluctant about supplying me with the necessary affidavits.

I'm weary of "holding the bag," Miss Pettigrew. Some other time, perhaps. A Winchelephant never forgets.

A Preposition, Yet

Harold J. Wendt, managing editor of the Wind River Mountaineer of Lander, Wyo., recalls the last presidential race when Al E. Smith was traveling through his state. While on the train, Smith observed three or four thousand sheep on the plains.

He turned to a Westerner and chirped:

"Where are all the barns to keep those sheep in?"

Observation

"To have loved, even though the love be unknown; and to have been loved, even though it be silently, is sweet to a woman. She can crystallize the memory in her heart and pass through life sad, perhaps, yet content, cold and deaf to all other voices. They say that a man is not like this.—Anon."

No?

Rubbing It In

The Mayor is now choosing to pun, it appears. A well-known builder was motoring through Central Park West with James J. the other evening and as they approached a handsome new apartment edifice (his newest headache) he turned to Hizzoner and said: "There's my last building."

"Last," niftied Walker, "but not leased."

Yushny's Russian revue, "The Blue Bird," will be presented in Syria Mosque next Thursday evening, March 10, as the seventh event in the May Beegle concert series. The company of 50 singers, dancers, comedians will be seen in a varied program made up of 17 acts, with Iascha Yushny, a versatile artist himself, acting as interlocutor. One of the acts will be scenes from Tschaikowsky's opera, "Pique Dame." There also will be many other colorful presentations, with music taken from various distinguished composers, the general effect, it is said, being that of amusing and artistic vaudeville in unusual stage settings.

It Is Expected that the New Telescope With the Great 200-Inch Reflector Will "Bring the Moon into Your Backyard"—That Is, It Will Clarify and Make Any Objects on the Surface of Our Satellite So Plain that Portions Being Observed Will Actually Seem to Be within a Few Hundred Feet of the Observers

To Reveal The MOON'S SECRETS!

Any Object Thirty Feet High Can Be Studied Through the Projected New Telescope, and a House of This Size, If There Were One on the Moon (Which of Course There Is Not), Could Be Plainly Seen

ASTRONOMERS now alive may soon be able to answer many secrets that the moon still hides from man. A new super-telescope is now being built that is 360,000 times more efficient than the human eye. It is provided with a reflector twice as wide as the present greatest telescope.

Do you want to know where this gigantic instrument will be installed? Do you know why it's now possible to build such a huge telescope although scientists thought, for a long time, that it was impossible? And, do you know that telescopes do not really magnify? These questions—and many more—are answered in the unusual article about the new super-telescope appearing in next Sunday's American Weekly. NEW BALL MAY MAKE STEVE WINNER

SOMETIMES, WHEN CIRCUMSTANCES lead to the retention of a baseball player who otherwise would have been let go, he turns out to be a valuable asset to his own club. Local fans are hoping that that will be the outcome in the case of Steve Swetonic, Pirate pitcher. If the Bucs had been able to get waivers on Swetonic again after they lapsed the first time, the North Sider would have been transferred to a minor league outfit. But when one of the eastern clubs in the National League refused to waive, Pittsburgh decided to keep him rather than turn him over to a rival team.

Steve Swetonic

So Steve is to continue wearing Buccaneer garb, and his preparations in the Paso Robles camp for the pennant season will be watched with interest. Manager Gibson figured that if Steve is good enough to be claimed by another club that ranks as a pennant contender he is good enough for the Rovers, and he sees no reason why the pitcher should not be able to negotiate a comeback successfully and prove a helpful man in the local hurling department.

THIS NEW BALL is in Swetonic's favor. Really, he has never had a fair chance to show what he can do with it, for in training camp last year he went down with an arm injury, and by the time that trouble had been remedied by a long course of treatment, the season was almost half over.

As a result, Steve had comparatively few opportunities to take advantage of the changed pitching conditions. He did not appear on the slab until June 24, never started a game during the season, took part in only 14 contests in relief roles, and worked in only 24⅓ innings.

In that limited service Swetonic cannot be said to have had a reasonable chance to demonstrate what results he may be able to get out of the less lively ball. He has yet to start a game with the official National League pellet as altered since 1930.

Possibly the raised stitching and the thicker cover may add something to his effectiveness and make him a better pitcher for the full nine-innings route than he was with the old bunny ball. At least, he is well worth the new trial he is receiving and it may turn out to have been a fortunate break for the Corsairs that they failed to get Swetonic through the waiver gauntlet.

A PIRATE OF the long ago bobs up in the trying out of Pitcher Eddie Trask by the A's, for the man recommending the youngster to Connie Mack was Joe Rickert, who played a brief engagement with the Buccaneers as an outfielder 'way back in 1898. Rickert came to the local club late that season from New Castle, but played in only two games as a substitute for Jack McCarthy in left field and was not retained by Manager Watkins. That was the year in which Tom McCreery came to the Pirates from the Giants, the Beaver citizen going to center field on July 7 to replace Tom O'Brien, who had succeeded Steve Brodie there in June. Young Trask, recommended by Rickert, is a right-hander, and, in an independent league in Louisiana last year, is reputed to have pitched a no-hit game with 21 strikeouts in nine innings.

Glenn Wright

MANAGER MAX CAREY is so well satisfied with the condition of Glenn Wright's trick ankles that he predicts Wright will be the National League's leading shortstop this year. Carey's only fear is that Glenn will overdo things in training, and he has taken steps to keep him from going the limit between the ball field and the golf course.

"I know a whole lot about Wright," Carey told Ed Murphy. "We were teammates in Pittsburgh and I got a line on him when he was having his good years. I know how he acted and hubbled over with enthusiasm when he was going well, and I also know how he did things in Brooklyn when he was having a lot of tough luck. As present he is just as he was when in top form in Pittsburgh. He's plumb full of energy and I'm sure he's going to play great ball for me."

THERE WERE TIMES when Barney Dreyfuss and John McGraw had their little differences over baseball matters, but no man in the game had uttered a finer tribute to the late owner of the Pirates than did McGraw when the passing of diamond notables since last fall was being discussed in the Giant camp.

"Baseball cannot make up for the loss of Barney Dreyfuss and Charley Comiskey," said the New York manager, "because they were the lifeblood of the game. I had my tiffs with Barney, but he was upright, a sportsman, a fighter and a wise baseball man."

THOUGH THE AGREEMENT between the majors and minors gives the former the right to sign players direct from college, it's different where sandlotters are concerned. The miners have first right there, and the big leagues must keep hands off. But the little leagues charge that the big fellows are cheating, getting around the rule by grabbing sandlot players through their minor league farms. The miners allege that this is a violation, and they threaten a test case before Commissioner Landis by protesting that Pitcher Schott and Catcher Frost, Cincinnati sandlotters, have been signed by the Reds for their Peoria farm.

THE MEMBERSHIP OF the Renaissance Negro basketball team, coming to Pittsburgh to meet the Rosenblum Celtics at Motor Square Garden one week from next Tuesday night, includes some great all-around athletes.

Fats Jenkins, said to be drawing as large a salary as any player ever did on the courts, was rated with the best amateur boxers seven years ago, but his contract compelled him to give up the glove game.

ANOTHER OF THE eastern passers, Bill Yancy, also is a top-notch baseball player, and holds down the shortstop job for the Lincoln Giants, of New York. Eyre Saitch at one time held the world Negro tennis championship.

Charley Cooper, the giant center, and Pappy Ricks, also have starred in other sports. These are two of the greatest players in basketball. Cooper is held to be at least equal to Dutch Dehnert, of the Celtics, on the pivot play, and some critics say he is even better. Ricks averaged above 14 points a game last season, and he participated in 140 contests.

Jimmy McLarnin

BOXING REGULATIONS IN New York provide that in championship fights the title holder shall receive 37½ and the challenger 12½ per cent of the receipts. But some matches might be mentioned in which the challenger, not the champion, would be the real drawing card, notably Jimmy McLarnin against Jackie Fields, Billy Petrolle against Fields, or Bobo Ariamendi against Al Brown. When any such bout is suggested by promoters the challenger, failing to see wherein a chance to win the title should be considered a sufficient inducement, feels that he ought to have more than the usual 12½ per cent. The latest instance involves McLarnin and Fields. Madison Square Garden wants to bring them together for the welterweight championship, but Pop Foster, manager of McLarnin, believes the fight would draw $15",000 and demands $30,000 for McLarnin's end, though guarantees are supposed to be prohibited in New York. "Fields has the title, but Jimmy will draw the crowd," is his argument.

GAME TONIGHT
Buffalo at Pittsburgh.

By CARL SHATTO

The Buffalo Bisons are the extremely high hurdle which the Yellow Jackets, racing toward an International Hockey League play-off berth, will be called upon to take at Duquesne Garden tonight.

A few weeks ago the Bisons, league leaders ever since the local skaters moved into the circuit, were regarded as "jinx" foemen who were expected to mop up on Pittsburgh opposition. But times have changed; so much so that the Jackets now regard the visitors as just another aggregation to be swept aside in their mad scramble to get into the money circle before the curtain is rung down.

LOCALS HOPEFUL

This feeling is inspired by the fact that the Bisons were handed a setback the last time they appeared here, and enhanced by the Reidmen's realization that they have been beaten only twice in their last 11 starts.

A 7-3 win in Cleveland and a 1-1 tie in Detroit have done much to bolster the locals' morale since they last appeared on home ice, and it wasn't particularly weak at that time.

The games in Cleveland and Detroit were extraordinarily rough encounters, but the only Pittsburgh casualty is Norman Locking, hard-shooting left wing, who is nursing a hip injury sustained in the Michigan city. Charley Reid, coach of the Canary Shirts, today said that there was some question as to whether Locking would be able to participate in the duel with the Bisons, and that Pat Shea had been groomed to step into the breach in the event that Norman's physician prescribed a rest cure.

NEED WIN BADLY

Pat, it will be remembered, did some pinch-hitting for Gordy Fraser recently when the defense ace was out with injuries, but the sturdy Irishman is more at home on the front line than in the backfield, for it was at left wing that he was used by the Chicago Hawks before he was sent here. Locking and Shea both are eager to share in the milling, and Coach Reid is not at all worried about the left wing situation.

The Jackets need one victory to deadlock their season series with the league leaders. This triumph may prove difficult of attainment, however, for the Bisons slapped down Detroit, 5-0, two games ago, indicating that they, too, are in a pretty fair stride.

Art Berlett, Jacket defenseman, released to Buffalo slightly more than a month ago, will make his first appearance here in an enemy uniform.

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE OLDEST LIVING THING ON EARTH—The big Cypress of Santa Maria del Tule, Mexico, may fairly claim to be the largest tree in the world, as well as the oldest living thing on earth. Its circumference is 154 feet, it is 50 feet in diameter and it rises to a height of 170 feet. By the annual growth rings its age has been computed at a minimum of 5,000 years. It still is in full vigor and is very celebrated in Mexico as the Montezuma Cypress. The Zapotecs of the village, which is situated in the State of Oaxaca, regard the tree as sacred, guard its branches from mutilation by visitors and affectionately brush the tree daily to keep it clean and spotless. A CIGARET HOLDER OF A NANDI GIRL—The Nandi tribe inhabit a part of British East Africa south of Mount Elgon. Their tribal mark is a hole bored in the upper part of their ears, while the women enlarge the lobe of the ear until it is large enough to accommodate jars and other vessels of preposterous proportions. These containers are used much as a civilized woman uses a handbag or a pocketbook. When the objects are removed the aperture in the lobe is large enough for a human arm to be thrust through it. A BUSHEL COVERS A MULTITUDE OF WEIGHTS—Conflicting state laws render very difficult an adequate determination of the status of the bushel as a unit of measure in this country. Some commodities in the different states are sold by what is known as "struck measure," while in others "heaped measure" is compulsory. In the absence of national legislation, there is an amusing divergence in the definition of a bushel in the various states. To quote only one commodity, a bushel of apples is 50 pounds in Arkansas, 48 pounds in Vermont, 47 pounds in Illinois, 45 pounds in Montana, 44 pounds in Maine, etc.

TOMORROW: DOGS ARE TIME ANNOUNCERS.

PIRATE GAME POSTPONED

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 3.—The first inter-club contest of the training grind for the Pittsburgh Pirates, which was carded for today, was postponed until a later date by Manager Gibson.

Gibson called the fracas off on account of the late arrival of Pie Traynor and Howdy Grossklos, infielders, who are needed to fill out the teams, but who are not in the right condition for a game as yet.

Needless to say, both the Regulars and Yanigans were severely disappointed when it was announced that the contest would not be played.

Both Traynor and Grossklos reported to camp in excellent condition, but Gibson decided that they needed a few days to get the kinks out of their arms and legs before they could be used in a regulation contest.

The Bucco pilot does not intend to inject a player into the lineup or allow him to overdo himself until he is really fit for hard work, taking no chances of having any of his men placed on the injured list.

The arrival of Traynor and Grossklos in camp brings the number of infielders to seven. John Simas, a recruit, will handle the first sack duties for the Yanigans in the games.

The first string lineup for the inter-club games announced today by Manager Gibson will include Lloyd Waner, center field; Paul Waner, right field; Comorosky, left field; Traynor, third base; Suhr, first base; Piet, second base; Thevenow, shortstop; the catcher and pitcher. The Regular battery will be worked in order, with Hal Finney probably behind the plate.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Ray Ewry

With the Olympic Games scheduled in Los Angeles this summer, and everybody more or less Olympic-minded, do you know that the late Alvin Kraenzlein, former University of Pennsylvania star and one of the world's best hurdlers, won four events in the Paris games of 1900, the second of the modern Olympic revivals? . . . He carried off the honors in the 60-yard sprint, broad jump and the 110 and 200-meter hurdles . . . R. C. (Ray) Ewry, an American, holds the record for the most Olympic victories, 10 in all . . . He won the standing high and Broad jumps in 1900, 1901, 1906 and 1908 and the standing hop, step and jump in 1900 and 1904. . . . The closest approach to this mark is Paavo Nurmi's feat of turning in six victories . . . And Paavo will be back to seek more laurels this year . . . It will be his fourth competition in the Olympics . . . LOCALS FAVORED TO TOP W.-J. TONIGHT

GAMES TONIGHT

West Virginia Wesleyan vs. Broaddus at Buckhannon, W. Va.
Fairmont vs. Salem at Fairmont, W. Va.

By JESS CARVER

Dr. Clifford Carlson's tattered and tired Pitt Panthers make their next to the last home appearance of the long basketball campaign in their pen at the Pitt Stadium tonight, and will seek to fasten their claws in the muchly patched coat tails of Wash-Jeff's ambitious, but not so very potent, Presidents. The Panthers came home from Boston with victory over Harvard and escaped being splattered with more than an ordinary amount of H'vard refinement, which is not figured to interfere with their play against Wash-Jeff tonight.

Pitt should take the Presidents by a comfortable majority. They should. The Dukes should have beaten Geneva, too; Notre Dame should have taken Southern California; Hayburner should have won the fifth at Latonia a couple y'ars ago and there should be a law.

WON TWO GAMES

Wash-Jeff appeared here in Pittsburgh early in the season and took a shellacking from Carnegie Tech. The Red and Black took several other trimmings afterwards, too, but last week, broke out in a rash of field goals and humbled West Virginia. The victory was only the second to be credited the Prexy forces. The other victim was Bethany. The team has lost an even dozen ball games.

Three members of the Pitt entourage, Russ Ochsenhirt, the center; Don Smith, star guard, and Tom Hunt, reserve forward, all residents of West View, will be honored at tonight's game by the West View Board of Trade. They will be presented suitable gifts by Sheriff Frank Gollmar.

The Perry High School uniformed band, which is the senior high for Hunt and Ochsenhirt and most of the graduates of West View's Junior High School, will accompany the delegation.

George P. Kiedaisch, C. A. McClain and John E. Reed have handled the arrangements for the affair, with the co-operation of the secretary of the board, Howard H. Wilt.

Coach Glen (Woofty) Wild, new chief mentor of the Prexies, likely will start the same lineup that went to the mat with West Virginia Saturday. He'll have Headley available for replacement duty, and Headley, in the same role against the Mountaineers, scored 20 points. The probable lineup:

Pitt.		Wash-Jeff
Lantz	F	Joy
Bowman	F	Lasher
Ochsenhirt	C	Bittner
Smith	G	Eagner
McCutcheon	G	Shaffer

RING CARD SET

Tomorrow night Tech and the Dukes meet in their return clash, the contest winding up the season for the Dukes. The Pitt swimming team is host to Franklin-Marshall in the K. A. C. pool, and Tech's boxers are slated for a duel with Wash-Jeff at Washington.

Coach Joe Orsini, who tutors the Panther boxers, has his lineup selected for the bouts with Army here Saturday. He'll use Harry Conti in the 125-pound clash; Willie Schempf, and either Harry Martin or Marius Santicola, in the 135-pound division; Mario Hubbo as a 145-pounder; Jack Schricker in the 155-pound weight and Francis Seigel and George Shotwell in the 165-pound class.

Conti may not be able to fight, his presence in the lineup depending on the extent of an injury suffered to his socking hand in a workout Monday.

Jim MacDougal, Duke star, will be among those missing when the Davismen meet Carnegie Tech tomorrow. Suffering from a fractured bone in his ankle, Dr. Leon O'Donnell, team physician, said MacDougal is definitely out of action for tomorrow's contest.

PREXIES LOSE LIEBER

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 4.—W. & J.'s chances for victory over Pitt in the floor engagement at Pittsburgh tonight were dealt a severe blow when Maury Lieber, star forward, was taken down last night with flu.

Shady Side Teams To Visit Cleveland

The Shady Side Academy basketball and wrestling team will meet the University School, of Cleveland, in Tri-State Prep School League events Saturday.

University School must win from Shady Side to clinch the basketball title. If Shady Side wins, the race will end in a three-way deadlock.

FORD CITY ADVANCES IN W. P. I. A. L. SERIES

TWO BATTLES ON CARD FOR TOMORROW

By JULIUS LEVIN

The twentieth annual W. P. I. A. L. basketball elimination series, inaugurated last Friday when Swissvale defeated East Pittsburgh, appears to have developed into a battle of the Campbells against the field.

The second edition of the Campbell coaching family successfully passed his first hurdle in the eliminations at the Pitt Stadium pavilion last night when Neenie Campbell, brother of the illustrious Bill, of Homestead renown, saw his Ford City quintet, champion of Section VI, defeat North Union, champion of Section XIII, 22 to 16, thus joining Homestead and Mt. Lebanon as quarter-finalists.

As a result of Ford City's victory, followers of scholastic basketball still have hopes of seeing a W. P. I. A. L. finale that will feature brothers as rival coaches. Homestead and Ford City are in separate brackets.

VICTOR SHOWS CLASS

The triumph of the Armstrong countians last night marked the first time a Ford City quintet had surmounted the first obstacle in its path in the elimination series. Ford City for years has been a contestant in the series, but in its previous appearances the team usually fell by the wayside in the first game.

Employing the same system of play that marks the Homestead attack, Ford City, while not possessing the finesse that featured the Milltowners' victory over Burgettstown last Monday night, flashed enough class to score a well deserved decision over Ray Welsh's North Union passers.

The Armstrong countians held the upper hand practically throughout a listless, but close struggle. The Fayette countians, aside from tieing the score on two occasions at 5-5 and 9-9, never were able to overtake the Ford City quintet.

Ford City got away to a running start in the first period when it counted five points to North Union's two. The losers reduced the lead somewhat in the second quarter by counting four points to their opponents' three, making the score at halftime, 8-7, with Ford City on the long end.

NORTH UNION FALLS

Shortly after the third period got under way, Ford City counted on a free shot to obtain a two-point advantage, but the tally was deadlocked when North Union registered a field goal to tie the score at nine-all. That was the last time North Union was on an even footing with the Armstrong countians.

Ford City put on pressure in its attack and gradually pulled away to lead, 13-9, going into the final eight-minute quarter. It was in the final session, however, that Ford City started to go places. Three field goals and three fouls gave it nine points, while North Union was held to seven in the closing period.

Both teams appeared ragged at times during last night's second round battle and Ford City will have to show a big improvement if it hopes to survive the next round.

Ford City presented a trio of fine passers in Baynor. Willits and Vent, who led the attack for the Armstrong countians. For the losers, Wade and Duranko appeared to be the best performers.

Ford City's victory gives it the right to engage Mt. Lebanon, victor over Aliquippa Tuesday night in the quarter finals on Thursday, March 10.

No games are scheduled in the eliminations tonight, but tomorrow will find two contests up for disposal. Both are out-of-town games, New Castle, Section III champion will engage Zelienople, champion of Section XVIII and vanquisher of Leetsdale, in a second round battle at Beaver Falls High School. The other game finds Canonsburg, Section XV champion, opposed to East Pike Run, Section XVI champion, at Washington High School.

The next game at the Pitt Stadium pavilion will be staged Monday night when Carl Glock's New Kensington quintet, champion of Section 1, opposes Sewickley Township, Section XII representative. The lineup of last night's game:

Ford City	Fg	F	Pt.	N. Union	Fg	F	Pt.

Borotra to Play Only in Doubles

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—Jean Borotra, young as a businessman, but old as a tennis player, yesterday announced sadly that the two do not mix and that never again would he take the court at Stade Roland Garros as a singles player in defense of the Davis Cup.

Arriving on the Ile De France with Christian Boussus and Antoine Gentien, fellow French players, to defend his American indoor singles title, Borotra announced his retirement from active play where more than his own reputation was at stake.

MOCK AND WARD WITH SEALS

The Trained Seals of the sports department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph went fishing and fly-casting over the air from Station WCAE, the Voice of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, last night.

With John G. Mock, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Federation of Sportsmen's Associations and secretary of the Allegheny Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America, spoke delightfully of fishing as a sport, while Charles W. Ward, president of the Pittsburgh Casting Club and the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, related the joys and intricacies of fly-casting, and revealed the plans for the national championship tournament to be held here this summer. Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, acted as master of ceremonies, quizzing both speakers.

Another interesting program is being prepared for next Wednesday night. Announcement of the details will be made in next Sunday's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Morrison Defeated In Pinehurst Final

PINEHURST, N. C., March 3.—(AP.)—Eric D. Thomson, Springfield (Mass.) golfer, won the twenty-eighth annual spring tournament here yesterday by defeating his finalist opponent, Robert G. Morrison, Pittsburgh, 1 up, in a see-saw battle.

Thomson had a card of 76, one stroke better than Morrison. Ben P. Kraffert, Jr., Titusville, Pa., who won the title last year, did not defend it.

Bond for Hockey Referees Posted

WINDSOR, Ontario, March 3.—Charles S. King, president of the International Hockey League, has arranged to post a bond for Canadian-born hockey referees to eliminate difficulties with United States immigration authorities regarding their admittance to the states to officiate at games there.

The matter came to a head Tuesday when Jerry LaFlamme and Puss Traub, assigned to work the Pittsburgh-Detroit game at Detroit, were held up at the border.

Gehringer Not To Oppose Seals

PALO ALTO, Cal., March 3.—(AP.)—Charley Gehringer, star second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, will not be on the first team Manager Bucky Harris sends to San Francisco next week to open a seven-game series with the Seals.

Gehringer's arm apparently is entirely recovered from an ailment which forced him out of the line-up last season, but Harris is taking no chances.

Baseball Notes

BILOXI, Miss., March 3.—(AP.)—Joe Cobb, hard hitting infielder and star Washington Senators' first base coach by virtue of a promotement from Manager Walter Johnson, he and not Joe Judge was regarded as the club's regular first baseman when the squad reported here. Cobb, who batted .318 in 1931, is engaged in a pending deal with the Detroit Tigers.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 3.—(AP.)—Allen (Dutch) Cooke, spare outfielder of the New York Yankees, has changed the "D. R." sign on his injured shoulder, which was operated on a few weeks ago. Cooke says his wing is now real trouper yesterday, making some long and accurate throws from the outfield.

LOS ANGELES, March 3.—(AP.)—Johnny Corriden, manager of the New York Giants, is a bit irked about the troublesome Red Lassman, Bill Terry, Terry reported promptly to camp, but Lassman, after announcing his intention to remain away from the camp until March 1, has failed to make his appearance on that date.

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

"The nicest thing in our disagreement with Heinie is evidenced in the tone of the many letters that have passed between us. Not a word that smacks of bitterness has been written by either side, and that is the way it should be. It is a bit hard to understand Meine's position, but certainly he has been a gentleman all the way."

The little broadcast from Pirate headquarters today was by Bill Benswanger, new president of the Pirates. Bill was discussing the Buccos' lone holdout, who still is with his guns and dogs along the Ol' Mississippi near St. Louis. Apparently there is quite a little difference of opinion between the athlete and his bosses as to what he is worth this year, but both sides have used good manners.

It is quite easy to see Heinie's side, or at least to consider it. The Dutchman was well beyond 30 when he reached his banner season. Had the same feat been achieved three or four years ago, the pitcher could have asked that his salary be doubled. But the panic was on when Heinie started to do big things and it was still doing double time when the season closed. The parade passed everybody's home except Heinie's; he's been a part of the show a long time and his folks were all waiting for the band to appear.

The club has two or three good reasons for not giving Heinie as much as he asks. In the first place the Pirate officials are a part of the agreement which promised a downward revision in salaries. Even if the owners did feel like meeting the pitcher's demand they might suffer a bad reaction in the rank and file of the team. For example, would it not be a bit dangerous to let it be known that Heinie was to get $15,000 or so while other stars were taking a cut? Personally, I think Heinie is worth all he can get, and I hope he gets it. But there are two sides to the problem.

Freddie Lindstrom praise of Rogers Hornsby as a double-play king is ok, and deserved, but when Fred states that Frank Frisch is a master of the double play he will get an argument from all corners of the diamond. As much as I like Frisch as a headliner, I think he is one of the weakest in the game in completing a double shuffle.

Hornsby and others who play the pivot correctly move away from the baserunner as they let loose of the ball. Frisch stands flatfooted and is a target for the daring baserunners, some of whom upset him as he fires wide of first base.

Frisch's weakness helped to lose the last game of the 1928 world series. The Yanks scored the tieing run after the Fordham Flash had allowed Lou Gehrig to topple him in a double-play attempt. Frisch threw the ball away and the score that deadlocked went over from second base. Bill McKechnie, manager of the Cardinals, was steaming about this bad play for hours after games ended.

Bunk!

TALK about being easy on your epiglottis—say, let me tell you something. Smoke a box of fifty King Edward 5c cigars and you will warble like a canary! We have a couple of millions of testimonials which we could show you—if we were not too modest!

Truth.

KING EDWARD Cigars will NOT help your singing—will not even cure fallen arches or hang nails. Each cigar will, however, give you twenty or thirty minutes of smoke satisfaction and make you realize that you have been nickel-wise and economical, at a time when everybody is demanding, and should receive, their money's worth.

An excellent cigar.

On the doorstep

WE were leafing through a photographer's files the other day when we came across this unusual portrait. It was so gripping and tragic that we asked the photographer about it, and here's what he told us. "That picture wasn't posed, although you might have thought so. In fact, the subject didn't even know he was photographed. I came down to the studio the other morning early and there he was asleep on the doorstep. I couldn't pass up the opportunity so I ran upstairs, grabbed a camera, and 'shot' him as he sat in a stupor."

Possibly you're wondering what place it has in a Gillette advertisement—and we're a bit inclined to wonder ourselves. Certainly there is no direct tie-up with our product. But now that we think of it—how much better this poor soul would look with a clean shave and a haircut! But we would not even imply that failure to shave will drag a man down to the depths. Of course, one can be somewhat neglectful about his person and still occupy a respected place in his community.

After all, the purpose of this message is to call your attention to the splendid razor blades Gillette is making today. It is impossible to express the shaving comfort these blades will afford you. They are expressly designed to glide across tender faces without burn or irritation. You must experience this sensation to appreciate it. We urge you to give the present Gillette a trial on our guarantee. Buy a package and use one or two blades. If every shave isn't absolutely clean and comfortable—far better than you have ever experienced before—return the package to your dealer and get your money back.

CITY LEAGUE CONFERENCE TONIGHT

By TOM BIRKS

With the initial meeting of the City Baseball League scheduled for this evening at Book's store, fans in the district probably will get a little idea just how the loop will shape up in the coming campaign.

With conflicting rumors going around, and the possibility of other leagues springing up like mushrooms in the next few days, the possibility of the city circuit operating is an open question.

All of last season's teams, headed by the champion Dormont, have been invited to attend, but through the winter season managers with franchises have been voicing different opinions regarding the makeup of the loop.

ROSTER UNCERTAIN

The old cry of retrenchment is going the rounds, and, just as one well known manager said a couple of days ago, the retrenchment ceases with the cry of "play ball" by the umpires. Dormont, Homewood, Books and J. L. Thomas are certain to be in the field, but there has developed opposition to the North Side Civics and Pleasant Valley.

The sponsors of the circuit are talking of an eight-club league, but at the present time this will be hard to arrange. Rumors state that a big concern again is going to back a first-class club, that will be within the standard of the City League, but some of the other teams may balk at the inclusion of a backer with a payroll that would outclass their meager efforts.

PAYROLLS TABOO

Pre-season gossip assumes that payrolls are going to be taboo, but this will be hard to prevent. Tonight's session probably will give the fans an idea of which clubs feel they can compete in City League baseball.

Headed by Manager Oscar Charleston, the Pittsburgh Crawfords are ready to leave for Hot Springs, to spend three weeks getting into shape for the forthcoming campaign. Some of the players, including Ted Radcliffe, Josh Gibson, Bobby Williams and Roy Williams, already are at the resort.

The club will use white home uniforms, and gray suits on the road, and expects to return about the middle of April. The new Crawford Stadium will be opened on or about April 28. Manager Billy Nixon is fast filling the season's schedule. For games, write Billy Nixon, Crawford Baseball Club, 1401 Wylie avenue.

The Millikin team, of Wilkinsburg, under the leadership of Loddy Walker, will be back, giving Holy City fans one of the best young clubs in the district. League affiliations have not been settled as yet, but Walker expects to place the team in a fast loop.

MRS. L. RILEY IS DEFEATED

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 3.—(AP.)—An 18-year-old Jacksonville debutante, Mary Rogers, who has been playing golf only two years, gave Helen Hicks, national champion, a genuine scare yesterday in their first round match of the Florida East Coast tournament.

Playing the champion on fairly even terms from the start, Miss Rogers was only 1 down at the turn. She proceeded to even the match on the tenth and went 1 up at the eleventh. Then Miss Hicks recovered her stride, as her opponent weakened under the unaccustomed tournament competition, and stroked out a 3-and-2 victory.

All the favorites advanced through the first round, but Virginia Van Wie had a struggle with Mrs. Joe Holsinger, Gainesville, Fla., before she managed to win, 3 and 2.

Maureen Orcutt, former Metropolitan titleholder, had a walkaway with Mrs. A. Maus, St. Augustine, 9 and 8.

Mrs. R. C. Lake, formerly Marion Turpie, of New Orleans, who won the southern crown there, piled up an impressive 7-and-5 victory over Mrs. A. Millea, Amawalk, N. Y.

DUMMER SEEKS BAXTER FOE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Who'll fight Charley Baxter?

Bill Dummer, matchmaker of Eddie Kapphan's Arena, is on the lookout for a suitable foe for Charley Jones' good - punching lightweight.

Charley Baxter

He says Battling Gizzy won't take him. Neither will several other lightweights who are up there.

Baxter, who is one of the best workmen in the local ranks, being a good, crowding boxer and a straight-from-the-shoulder hitter, deserves a break in the way of a bout with a good opponent. He has lost only one bout since coming around here, being one of Frankie Bojarski's many knockout victims last year. Since then he has belted his way through the field until he's reached a point where the promoters will have to bring in out-of-town boxers of class to meet him if they want to use him.

While on the hunt for an opponent for Baxter for next week, Dummer has not lost sight of this week's show. He has two 10-round bouts listed tomorrow night, with Billy Holt and Ray Lyle, welterweights, on top and Joey Thomas and Dandy Allen, featherweights, in the prelude. Two six-round bouts also are listed.

Between Rounds

The Guido Costa now boxing in California is the former Young Guido, of Youngstown and Sharon, who boxed Buck McTiernan, Mickey Solomon and other district middleweights.

Hans Kampfer, the German, who meets Benny Ginsberg in one of the bouts on the wrestling card at Motor Square Garden one week from tonight, is a reigning sensation in St. Louis, where he meets Strangler Lewis in a main bout this week.

Isidore Castanaga, 21-year-old Italian heavyweight champion of South America, is set route to New York from Buenos Aires to wage a campaign for the world championship. He will attend the Max Schmeling-Jack Sharkey bout on June 18 to look over the situation. His record shows 35 bouts, all of which he has won, 29 of them with knockouts. He has fought throughout Italy and in France, Florida, Cuba and South America. He knocked out Vincent Parrillo, now campaigning in New York, in two rounds and stopped Mike McTigue in one in Havana. Mateo Ong, known in New York, lasted two rounds against him.

Joey Spiegal, Uniontown welterweight, wants to land a return bout with Davy Grove, the only opponent to beat him as a professional, and also would like to fight Billy Holt again. He has a win in his record over Holt.

Eddie Lord, who boxes Battling Gizzy in one of the two 10-round bouts at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, has licked Battling Battalino, recognized featherweight champion, Roger Bernard, Ray Miller, Mike Ballerino and other good ones. He was the first opponent of Phil Glodstein when the local lightweight turned professional in Madison Square Garden, New York.

A list of 86 entries has been received for the Tri-State championship amateur bouts under the auspices of the Veterans' Association of the 111th Infantry, to be held in the Moose Temple tomorrow and Saturday nights. There are eight contestants in the flyweight class, five in the bantam, 17 in the feather, 13 in the light, 17 in the welter, eight in the middle, six in the light-heavy and four in the heavyweight class. Ray Jennings, Johnny Shuster, Buck Makrum and Jack Collins are the heavyweights.

Eddie Zivic, brother of Jack, Pete and Fritzie, is one of the entrants in the Veterans' tourney. He has just returned from New York, where he engaged in an inter-city tournament.

The second stringers will have Grosskloss at second; Vaughn, shortstop; Jensen, center field; Barbee, left field; Dugas, right field; Young, third base; Simas, first base, the catcher and pitcher, Brensel is expected to catch for the Yans.

The Yanigans are an optimistic bunch and are already stating just what they are going to do to the Regulars. It is an old custom of the Pirates that should the Yans win, they are presented with a box of cigars. The Yans are so certain that they are going to take the first contest that they have in a body sent in their orders for their brand of cigars.

Vignettes

Strangler, getting ready to pin him—you always can see the falls coming—when one of McMillen's feet struck the referee and knocked him partly through the ropes unconscious . . . Lewis released his grip and McMillen seized the opportunity to come down upon Lewis and pin him . . . But the referee was "out" and couldn't declare the fall . . . After what seemed an eternity, McMillen, surprised because he hadn't been slapped on the back and declared the winner, turned around just in time to see a spectator push the referee back into the ring . . . In a jiffy, Lewis extricated himself from the hold and turned and pinned McMillen, and, the referee, coming to and seeing this, declared him the winner . . . Amid the clamor of the spectators and the protests of McMillen, police cleared the ring—and that was that . . . The wrestlers they are, indeed, a funny race . . . Tie them if you can!

Remember back to the good old days when Barney Oldfield and Bob Burman were thrilling our fathers with their amazing speed of a mile a minute on automobile speedways? . . . And now this Sir Malcolm Campbell is doing better than four miles a minute, and we boulevard speedsters want to know what is delaying him.—HARRY KECK.

Insull Group Indicates Dangers of Pyramids of Holding Companies

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE DANGERS of pyramided structures of holding companies are being strikingly illustrated in the troubles of the Insull organizations. The actual operating companies have suffered to only a moderate extent from the ravages of the business slump. But the holding companies at the top of the pile have been placed in serious positions as a result of the drastic declines in the market values of the stocks of the companies close to the bottom of the pile.

Corporation Securities Company of Chicago and Insull Utility Investments, Inc., are the companion organizations at the peak of the Insull pyramid of companies. Both find their credit extended close to the danger point. Both have little equity left for their many classes of security holders.

A reorganization will be necessary in the near future. The trend of the market for public utility stocks will be the dominant factor in making the reorganization plans a success or a failure. If the market follows a declining trend, the only assets will be in the hands of banking creditors. If the trend is upward, the equities of security holders will be restored and there will be a basis upon which to rearrange the capital structures. The reorganization probably will be in the form of a merger of Insull Utility Investments and Corporation Securities. Each company holds stock in the other. There are debts to each other and their investment portfolios are similar. A merger would eliminate many conflicting and misleading accounts.

Organized to Protect Control of Congress

INSULL UTILITY Investments came into the world at the close of 1928. It was followed in October, 1929, just before the market break, by Corporation Securities. The first year of the bull market was a period of struggle for control of important utility properties. The major groups were bidding against each other to get the key operating companies.

Samuel Insull had been the dominant factor in developing a large number of strong gas and electric companies in the Middle West but he did not control them. He and his associates saw that they would be in danger of falling under the domination of other interests unless they could secure ownership of large blocks of the stocks of their companies. Their resources were insufficient to secure this control. They came to the conclusion that holdings of 20 to 30 per cent of the stock by specially organized investment companies would protect their domination of the properties.

This accounted for the formation of the two investment companies which are at the apex of the pyramid of Insull organizations. Farther down the pyramid were other holding companies and operating companies which in turn held stocks of additional operating companies.

Capital Structures Highly Complicated

INSULL AND HIS associates kept the controlling interests in the common stocks of the two investment companies. The bulk of the capital was secured by the public sale of securities. Insull Utility Investments has two classes of funded debt and three classes of preferred stock outstanding in addition to the common stock. Corporation Securities has two classes of funded debt in addition to its preferred and common stock.

At bull market prices the two companies bought 19.19 per cent of the stock of Commonwealth Edison Company, 29.21 per cent of the stock of Middle West Utilities, 28.78 per cent of the stock of Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company, and 11.45 per cent of the stock of Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, in addition to minor holdings in other Insull properties.

What happened to these enormous investments will be discussed in this column tomorrow.

FEBRUARY CAR SHIPMENTS

DETROIT, March 3.—Graham-Paige Motors Corporation produced 2,095 cars in February, compared with approximately 2,500 in February, 1931.

Increase Indicated For Shoe Business

ST. LOUIS, March 3.—Brown Shoe Company is manufacturing an average of 50,000 pairs of footwear daily, about 80 per cent of capacity. All units are operating steadily, increasing schedules and current volume being considered good for early in the season.

Orders received since November 1 show increases in each month to date and over corresponding months of the previous year, indicating probability of a better spring trade than in 1931.

Electric Power Production Drops

NEW YORK, March 3.—Electric power production during the week ended February 27 totaled 1,512,158,000 kilowatt hours, which compares with 1,633,353,000 kilowatt hours in the corresponding week of last year, a decrease of 7.4 per cent, according to the National Electric Light Association. This is a less unfavorable comparison than was reported for the preceding week, when output was 8 per cent below the like 1931 week.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

STOCK MARKET SLIPS AFTER ADVANCE

Signs of Stiffening Shown In Early Afternoon With List Near Previous Close

NEW YORK, March 3.—(AP.)—The forward march in share prices came to a halt today, as the stock market demanded hardier fare than the faint indications of business improvement has yet provided.

A further flurry of short covering in the first few minutes started the session off with a bullish flourish, but selling was quickly attracted by the higher levels and buying dwindled.

Union Pacific, for instance opened up 2½, then slid back 2. Auburn had another sinking spell, showing a loss of 5 points before support appeared. American Telephone rose 1½ points, fell back 2½, then recovered partly. United States Steel rose a point, then slipped back. Peoples Gas was under some pressure, losing 3 points, and Bohn Aluminum lost as much, on the dividend omission. The list showed some signs of stiffening in the early afternoon, when prices generally were close to yesterday's final levels.

The Bank of England's failure to reduce its discount rate another step to 4 per cent, from 5, tended to indicate that optimism was running beyond actualities. Nevertheless, sentiment in Wall street continued moderately bullish, in view of the impressive indications of restored banking stability at home, and the abatement of financial stress abroad.

The money market continued to indicate easing credit over coming months. Time money, while extremely inactive, was quoted at 3¼ to 3½ per cent, off ¼ of 1 per cent from yesterday. Call money remained unchanged at 2¼ per cent outside.

While there were a number of minor adverse dividend announcements, trade and business news generally continued to reflect the slight improvement noted yesterday.

Kroger Grocery Plans to Expand

CINCINNATI, March 3.—(AP.)—A plan of expansion has been announced to stockholders of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company by President Albert H. Morrill.

Saying that stores had been closed in the past as an aftermath of an "orgy of expansion" in 1928, he added: "But we have a program to open 60 new stores—though for various reasons I cannot say anything as to their location."

Exporters to Seek Shanghai Business

NEW YORK, March 3.—Export authorities are reported advising manufacturers of textile and other machinery to start the solicitation of orders from Japanese and Chinese interests owning cotton and other mills in Shanghai. Prospects of an early termination of hostilities in Shanghai, it is held, now open the way for owners of wrecked mill to plan for rehabilitation of their plants.

Sees Improvement In Bank Situation

NEW YORK, March 3.—The New York Federal Reserve in its monthly review says the banking conditions showed substantial improvement in February. Bank closings were reduced to about one-third the number in each of the two previous months. Unseasonal currency withdrawals have been followed by moderate return flow of currency to banks after the first week of February, indicating cessation of hoarding.

Chicago Gasoline Market Firmer

CHICAGO, March 3.—Better sentiment has been noted in the spot gasoline market during the past few days and has been reflected in the price of lower grade gasoline below 57 octane, which has firmed up ⅛ cent and is now quoted 3 to 3¼ cents a gallon.

Pennsy Loadings Lower for Week

Pennsylvania Railroad car loadings during the week ended February 27 were 89,032 cars, compared with 91,211 in the week preceding and 113,492 in the like 1931 week.

Eddins Elected New Olds Chief

DETROIT, March 3.—D. S. Eddins has been elected president of Olds Motor Works, division of General Motors Corporation. He formerly was vice president and general manager.

Note—Demand rates are nominal.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Raw sugar was firm early today, but trading was light. Refiners showed a disposition to await developments in Cuba, however, and a sale was confirmed of 30,000 bags of Cubas for prompt shipment to an operator at 2.90c, an advance of 1.32c.

Refined sugar was unchanged at 4.15c for fine granulated with a fair inquiry reported, but only for immediate requirements.

Forbes

Dollars Won't Always Buy So Much as Today

—By B. C. FORBES—

MORE DOLLARS are to be put into circulation.

This means that each dollar will buy less.

Mr. Forbes

What do you propose to do with your dollars?

DO YOU INTEND to hold on to them until you can get less for them? Do you plan, as so many plan, to invest in bonds and stocks once you feel sure that business recovery is definitely under way, the return to prosperity clearly in sight?

Do you recall how so many people reasoned in 1929? They were then dabbling in stocks. They weren't buying for investment, they were not buying to hold. They would joy-ride with the market so long as it kept going up and up. Then, when it showed signs of falling, they would sell out.

What could be smarter?

Alas, we know what actually happened. Millions of stock buyers, instead of pocketing profits, suffered severe losses. So many rushed to sell at one time that pandemonium broke loose. Quotations tumbled headlong. Profits evaporated overnight.

WE HAVE a similar situation now—except that it is entirely different, if such an Irishism may be permitted.

Many millions of dollars have been deposited in banks, or piled up in savings banks, or placed in safety deposit boxes, or hidden at home for the purpose of 'investing in securities—when the right time comes.

It is probable that the market will be missed this time just as it was by so many in 1929.

IT WAS THE shrewd, farsighted Commodore Vanderbilt who, asked the secret of his success in the securities market, replied:

"I never wait for the last eighth."

Yet, how many throughout the country are hopeful of proving wiser than was the ripely-experienced Commodore?

NO MORTAL CAN foretell whether bond prices will relapse to lower prices than even those absurdly unreasonable prices recorded some little time ago. No mortal can foretell whether new minimum prices will be registered by stocks.

No mortal can foretell whether wheat and corn and cotton, whether steel and copper and lead, whether sugar and rubber and silk will fall still further or start rising. Will clothing and shoes and furniture become cheaper before advancing? Who can tell?

But this much can be foreseen, this much can be foretold: The elaborate plans which have been made for helping harassed banks and railroads and farmers and real estate owners, etc., for enabling banks to release billions of additional credit, for coaxing hoarded currency into circulation by stopping bank failures—all this is designed to stimulate activity and prices.

Therefore, it is as certain as the rising of the sun that the general price level will by and by rise.

IT IS FUTILE to exhort people to "buy now" for patriotic reasons—just as it was futile to urge people not to withdraw funds from banks when banks were closing by the hundred.

"Buy now for profit." That deserves thoughtful consideration by every one of us. (Did you notice, for example, that two important automobile companies have announced an increase in prices?)

One of these days people are going to awaken to the fact that they have carried their timidity too far, that they have failed to get in on the ground floor, that they kept their cash too long in cold storage, that the things they intended to purchase have become dearer.

May it not be significant that in seven hours' dealings last month the average price of New York Stock Exchange stocks jumped up 20 per cent?

WHEAT PRICES SHOW GAINS

CHICAGO, March 3.—Fresh upturns in grain values early today accompanied higher quotations of securities at New York and on wheat at Liverpool. Introduction of a Senate bill at Washington to impound farm board wheat at less than 81 cents for No. 2 hard was also construed as bullish. Opening at a shade to ½-⅝c higher, Chicago wheat futures afterward held near the initial limit. Corn started unchanged to ¼c up and later kept firm.

Washington's proposals to prohibit the sale of Farm Board wheat at lower than 81 cents for No. 2 hard grades were interpreted by influential traders as showing a trend in Congress to fix a practical minimum price for stabilization holdings which have been hanging over the market.

A fair amount of overnight export business in North American wheat was announced. Famine reports were received from Russian districts east of the Volga River.

COTTON RISES, THEN SAGS

NEW YORK, March 3.—Cotton opened barely steady today, 2 points up to 1 point off with buying influenced by firm cables for the early contracts and offset by some southern selling for the later deliveries. Orders were evenly divided. The demand increased slightly after the firm opening of the stock market. The southern selling continued, however, and after selling up to 7.19 for May and 7.55 for October, or 2 to 4 points net higher, the market sagged back to about yesterday's closing quotations.

Trading became much less active after the early buying had been supplied and prices worked lower under further southern selling or realizing. May contracts sold off from 7.19c to 7.10c and October from 7.55c to 7.46c, with the market at midday showing net losses of about 5 to 6 points.

EMBERS OF LOVE -:- Story of a Pretty Girl in Whom Burned The Flame of a Great Emotion -:- By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Lily Lou Has Difficulty in Earning Enough Money To Get Along

CHAPTER XXV

The days sped by.

"Beg pardon, dearie," the landlady said, "but I always get my rent in advance. I knew it just slipped your mind, so I thought I'd speak of it . . . did I do right to speak of it? You wasn't expecting to move, dearie?"

Lily Lou was surprised . . . she had not realized . . . time goes so fast.

She paid the rent for another month. You must have a place to live, even if you haven't enough to eat . . . nobody's really hungry when it's so hot . . . Perhaps there were cheaper places to live, but she hated to think of them. This was bad enough, so dark and musty with its damp, soapy-smelling linoleum, cold looking bathroom that reeked of lysol.

"I pride myself on keeping a clean house," the landlady told Lily Lou when she moved in. "I can see you like things nice and clean, too. Well, I can promise you I'm always at it."

Lily Lou had not known that cleanliness could be so dismal. The linoleum that Mrs. Grampas sluiced down every day with strong suds was always faintly sticky underfoot. There was always the smell of damp and dust, and laundry soap. Half the time there were no curtains at the windows. Mrs. Grampas, skirts pinned back to show sagging cotton hose and the late Mr. Grampas' slippers was perspiring over the laundry tubs. And when the curtains went up again they were as gray as when they came down.

DESTROYS LETTER

Lily Lou began a humorous letter to Bess about it. She wrote a page about poor Mrs. Grampas and her "dearie" and "darling" and all the other endearments which dripped like honey from her tight pale lips. Her "Don't mind my hair, dearie. I was just goin' to sneak over to the avenue for a finger wave, but I thought I'd just clean up the house good first. I do like a clean house, even if some don't appreciate it!" She smiled to herself as she wrote about the landlady's futile struggle with dirt and the sticky heat of summer and her fallen arches.

But it did not sound funny when she read it over. It sounded sad. Poor Mrs. Grampas. She was young once . . . happily married. . . .

She tore up the letter. Thought wildly, "What can I write about? About the funny places I eat? I've filled pages about the automats, and the basement tearooms, and the shops, and Fifth avenue buses, and Grant's tomb, and the Bowery and the Statue of Liberty—"

And the family asked questions in their letters: "Are you studying with Tolari? What kind of piano did you rent? Is it a grand? Do you mind the heat? How much do you get? Is living high? Have you made any nice friends?"

What could she tell them? That she hadn't found work, and her money was oozing away, and she hadn't rented a piano, and she hadn't gone to see Tolari and she didn't know a soul?

She decided that it must have been the heat that made her so ill on the train, and when she first came to New York. She felt quite well now. Thank goodness everything doesn't happen at once. She didn't have to worry about work when she was so ill—she had the piano job in the chop suey place then, and now that she felt well again and she couldn't find work.

Anyway they didn't ask about Ken. After her mother's first bewildered protest and Mary's "I-told-you-so" and Bess' indignant tirade full of veiled hints about what she knew about the Sargents and could tell if she wished to, the incident was closed.

There was no doubt about it she had done the right thing to come East. There would have been awkwardness if she had stayed at home or gone back to Woodlake as she had hoped to in her first desperate loneliness.

It made it easier for the family to have her gone too. She could hear her mother saying, proudly . . . daring them to doubt her. "Oh, Lily Lou is in New York studying now. We all felt that she and Ken were too young to settle down. Oh yes, we had the marriage annulled, and as I told Kenfield they can marry again in a year or two if they want to."

The Lansings were all proud. They'd pretend. Nobody would know her mother's worried pain, her father's smoldering hate for everyone who bore the name of Sargent.

STOPS WORRYING

They were as kind as they were clannish. Nobody not even Bess, ever made dad feel that he was a failure clerking now and then in Rule Fletcher's store, never even attempting to support his family.

They were even sweet to Uncle Zeph who kept moonshine whisky in his chaps in the barn, and to Aunt Dolly who had had a baby and was never married. And so, if they could hold up their heads in spite of Uncle Zeph and Aunt Dolly and all the wagging tongues of Woodlake, they'd manage to do it for her, too. Besides, it's no disgrace having your marriage annulled . . . not really . . . at least most people wouldn't think so . . . oh, why did it have to happen? Why did it have to happen to her?

At this point she always stopped worrying about work, and her career . . . Career . . . a living . . . what did that matter? Why go on living when you're dead inside . . .

To have to get through life without Ken . . . a long life maybe. Never to be in his arms again. Never to stroke his hair. Never to kiss the faintly freckled spot on his cheek bone where the skin was soft and downy.

Through the long hot nights she lay awake living over again her brief sweet life with him.

Little by little she forgot the things she wanted to forget. Peggy Sage . . . that last scene with Ken's father.

Just the romance lasted. The love that had been hers and that some day . . . some day in some way that she didn't know just yet would come back.

She took to pitying girls whom she met in employment agencies and lunch counters, and on the street. Now there's an unfortunate. Typical old maid. Poor thing, nobody ever loved her. And she'd think of Ken, and her heart would be warm until something reminded her that if she didn't get work pretty soon . . .

Two days in an office, addressing envelopes. An odd day or two in a department store, jerked from department to department, supervised, questioned, advised . . . salesslips, salesmanship classes, employment secretaries, promises to call her in a few days . . . That couldn't go on. She'd have to get something permanent . . .

She got it at last. Went to work in a mop and globe factory one hot day in September when the air was heavy and damp, and she felt too discouraged and sick to care very much whether the hesitant forelady decided on her or not.

It was piece-work. Painting maps with water-color paint. It was interesting when you took time to discover whether it was the Gulf of Mexico or the North Sea you were doing. Some days Lily Lou made only 80 or 90 cents.

The forelady, a tall angular woman whose scrawny, wattled neck was supported by a tall boned net collar, seemed to take delight in condemning Lily Lou's work.

"This is smudged—we can't use that! Your blues are dirty—throw that out!"

What would she do? What can you do when you're afraid to give up even an unprofitable job like that?

"I'm just about desperate!" she told the girl who had the hall bedroom upstairs when they happened to meet and chat for a moment on the landing that evening.

"I could get you a temporary job playing the piano for a children's dancing school. It would pay so much better than your factory job that I should think it would pay you to try for it."

Lily Lou was elated. She went back to her cheerless room singing under her breath. She'd get the job all right. Make it permanent. My but it was lucky to have met that Maxine Rochon she seemed to know everybody in New York.—

"Excuse me, Miss Lansing," Mrs. Grampas, the landlady, said pushing open the folding door. "I just happened to be in the hall and I couldn't help but hear what you and Miss Rochon was saying. I never listen in, but the door was ajar so I couldn't help hearing."

"I just thought dear, how I hate to see a girl get in wrong when she first comes to the city. So I thought it was only my duty to tell you . . . well, I can't prove it or not she would go, but I have good reason to think that Miss Rochon ain't what . . . well . . . dearie—"

Lily Lou felt her angry color rising.

"I'm sure you mean to be kind," she murmured and while she was searching around for some polite way of dismissing the woman, Mrs. Grampas began again.

"I hope I don't do wrong to mention it but that Miss Rochon is no fit companion for you. Take my tip and keep away from her and her fast crowd because dear she's . . . well . . . she's NOT a nice girl!"

ALL IN A DAY

By MARK HELLINGER

"THIS LITTLE STORY," writes Julius E., "is a comment of some sort on human nature. It concerns Nat Brusiloff, the radio orchestra leader, and another man who might just as well be called Charlie. The story was unfolded during a dinner at Mr. Brusiloff's home last week and I secured his permission to send it to you. I think you'll like it.

"The story begins in Baltimore, Md. Nat and Charlie were neighbors, their families the best of friends. When the Brusiloffs packed their belongings and moved to Washington, D. C., Charlie's family followed suit. They were still neighbors and extremely good friends.

Nat and Charlie went to the same schools, played the same games and had the same friends. But Charlie was the leader of the two. He was just a bit brighter in school, he was far more versatile in athletics and, let it be admitted, he displayed a much more intensive personality.

"Charlie had one favorite expression that he used several times a week. Sometimes it had a sting to it, but often it was more as an observation than as a piece of malice.

"'Did you hear what they say about us?' he would say. 'They say that, even though we're friends, I shine and you don't. I'm just a little better than you are in everything, ain't I, Nat.'

"And Nat's reply would always be the same.

"'That's right,' he would return. 'In everything but the violin. There I am better.'

"That galled the other youth more than I can express here. A product of a musical family, it was obvious at a very early age that Nat possessed musical genius. Charlie, who didn't want to be second best in anything, took up the violin and practiced diligently five, six and seven hours a day in order to overcome Nat's inherited advantage. It wasn't long before he, too, was a proficient violinist.

"Meanwhile, Nat Brusiloff had developed into a child prodigy. At the age of 10, he had already given several concerts in and about Washington and Baltimore. New York heard of him. When he was 12 he was offered a chance to play in Carnegie Hall. He accepted eagerly. And so brought Charley with him.

"Nat told the authorities he had a young friend with him who also played the violin. Couldn't he appear on the same program? He was told they had never heard of this other boy. Well, would they listen to him? They said they would.

"They did. And their opinions were unanimous. Charley, they said, was a fine musician, but as yet not quite in Nat's class. Nat kept pleading for his pal. He insisted that they played an excellent duet and couldn't something like that be arranged as a sort of encore? The authorities finally yielded that point, and Nat raced home to tell Charley the good news.

"He spoke most enthusiastically about the number they would play together, and he pictured their success as only a 12-year-old boy can do it. In the middle of his rave, Charley stopped him.

"'How about the billing?' he asked, as though he had been a ham actor all his life. 'Will my name be as large as yours?'

"Nat said he didn't see how that was possible. The other youth's chin went up in the air.

"'All right, then,' he asserted, 'I will not play.'

"Nat argued. His family argued. They tried to point out to him that he was making a terrible error. But the boy would not listen.

"'I don't care what anybody says,' he stated arrogantly, 'I'll never play second fiddle to you, Nat, as long as I live. And that's final.'

"And it was . . .

"After the concert, a tour was arranged for young Brusiloff. He traveled extensively—and when the tour was completed, his entire family settled in New York. Never, at any time, was there a call or a message from either Charlie or his family.

"The years go by and, at the age of 26, Nat Brusiloff is busily engaged in radio work. He is commissioned to organize a studio orchestra for the Columbia Broadcasting Company. For days and days he interviews musicians until finally the personnel of the orchestra is selected.

"One afternoon, following a long rehearsal, Nat is alone in one of the studio rooms, arranging a number. He hears a voice.

"'I hear Columbia is organizing a studio orchestra,' it says. 'I play the violin.'

"Nat looks up to see a shabbily-dressed man standing in the doorway. There is nothing familiar about his appearance, yet Nat is somehow certain that he has met him before. There is an awkward silence. Then Nat speaks.

"'We're all full right now,' he says rather hesitantly, 'but you can drop in again. We might need a second violinist in a few days.'

"There is another silence. The shabby one smiles faintly. He speaks—and there is no trace of arrogance in his tone.

"'I'll still goes, Nat,' he murmurs. 'I'll never play second fiddle to you.'

"By the time Nat reached the door the man had vanished down the hall. It took days of steady inquiry, but finally the Musicians' Union informed Nat that Charlie had left New York and had given no forwarding address.

"Funny what pride will do."

LARITA LA PALOMA! THE NEW GIRL IN MY HUSBAND'S OFFICE. SUCH A NAME! EVEN WITHOUT SEEING HER I KNOW SHE'S A VAMP. IMAGINE!
ANOTHER THING THAT OPENED MY EYES WAS HIS APPARENT UNCONCERN WHEN I ASKED ABOUT HER.
LARITA LA PALOMA! HE ADMITTED SHE WAS DARK, AND PROBABLY HAS THOSE THREE-CORNERED EYES LIKE THE VAMPS IN THE MOVIES.
THOSE BAGGY CIRCLES UNDER MY EYES SHOW UP MORE NOW. I HAVE A SORT OF PUFFY LOOK FROM GALLOPING THROUGH THIS HOUSE WITH A BROOM TOO.
AND LOOK AT MY HANDS! THAT'S CAUSED BY THE STUFF I PUT IN WATER TO CLEAN PAINT, AND GRABBING THE HANDLES OF HOT FRYING PANS WHILE GETTING HIS MEALS ON TIME.
I'LL BET HER HANDS ARE JUST SO. A LOT OF THAT RED GOO ON THE NAILS, IMAGINE!
WHILE I'M SLOSHING AROUND IN THAT STUFFY LAUNDRY, HOLDING MY FACE IN THE HOT STEAM, GETTING CLOTHES OUT OF THE BOILER, HIS LORDSHIP IS HIRING AN OFFICE GIRL WITH A NAME LIKE LARITA LA PALOMA!
WELL I WON'T DO ANOTHER LICK OF UNNECESSARY WORK IN THIS HOUSE UNTIL I FIND OUT ABOUT HER. NO SIR!

Pusillanimous

The people voted $6,000,000 of bonds a dozen years ago for the construction of the subway. They felt that the improvement was needed to facilitate the transportation of the workers to and from the downtown business district during the rush hours, and to relieve traffic congestion on the downtown streets. The need is even greater now than it was then.

The city in the meanwhile has spent in preparation for the construction about $300,000, which will be lost if the plan is abandoned.

The City Transit Commission has practically recommended the building of the subway now and has pointed out that this is an especially good time to build it because costs are unusually low and it would furnish jobs to many men badly in need of jobs.

Nevertheless, in spite of the people's authorization and the Transit Commission's recommendation, Council is apparently seeking some way in which to dodge the mandate and ditch the project. Seemingly it seeks to drop the subway, but to put the blame on someone else.

That, at any rate, is the impression created by the queer tactics it has been using in handling the matter.

First it was proposed to resubmit the project to the people in the form of a referendum in the April primary—a foolish and unnecessary procedure; for what better reason is there for asking the citizens to vote on this a second time than for asking them to vote a second time on anything else on which they have already passed?

Doubt having arisen as to the legality or, at least, the expediency of the referendum plan, nothing has been done about it. But Council has decided, instead, to get the opinions of the Chamber of Commerce and various other civic and business organizations.

But why should their advice be sought when the city already has, in the Transit Commission, a body specially appointed to study transit problems and give the very sort of advice that Council says it desires?

What is the use of having a Transit Commission if Council is going to ignore the carefully considered judgment that it expresses after years of study, and instead ask for the snap judgment of organizations that have probably not studied the subject at all, or at any rate not more than superficially?

Absolutely Safe

Idle Money Can Be Put to Profitable Use by Investing In the New Baby Bonds.

No one can say with any assurance of accuracy how much idle money is laid away in strong boxes and stockings in the Pittsburgh district. But it can scarcely be questioned that it amounts to a large sum.

The withdrawal of the money from circulation is bad for everybody—bad for the owners of the money, because they are losing interest; bad for business, because it reduces the circulating medium necessary for brisk trade; bad for the community, because it means just so much less capital available for the financing of industrial and mercantile operations which would furnish work for the unemployed.

Much of the idle money has been kept in idleness because of the owners' lack of confidence in the ordinary forms of investment. But they are now offered an investment that is as safe as the Nation itself, in the new baby bonds which the United States government is about to offer the people.

The bonds are to pay 2 per cent interest and will be available in denominations as low as $50. They mature in a year, but are payable before maturity on 60 days' notice. A. W. Robertson, of Pittsburgh, state chairman of the campaign for the sale of the bonds, expresses the opinion they will be accepted by many concerns at face value just as if they were cash.

Good business judgment as well as regard for the welfare of the community bids people who have idle money to put it into these gilt-edged government securities.

Daylight Saving Time

The Clearing House Association Is Right in Calling for An Early Proclamation.

Councilman W. Y. English's proposal that a referendum be held to determine whether or not the people of Pittsburgh desire daylight saving time this year has been tabled. Nevertheless, a doubt seems to have arisen as to our having it.

The Pittsburgh Clearing House Association has passed a resolution calling on Mayor Charles H. Kline to issue the customary proclamation, and to issue it at an early date, so that the railroads may have time to rearrange their schedules.

The request is a reasonable one. No end of confusion will result from postponing action too long.

There are many people in Pittsburgh who oppose daylight saving time and would like to see the clocks unchanged. But it is to be borne in mind that certain business operations would be transacted less conveniently if we did not operate on the same time schedule as New York and the other large eastern cities. It would be very awkward for us to try to pursue an independent course.

A Downtown Park

The Chamber of Commerce has an excellent idea in the proposal that the land occupied by the postoffice on Smithfield street, between Third and Fourth avenues, be turned into a park when the new federal building is ready for occupancy.

Pittsburgh needs a downtown breathing spot—a place where sales people, clerks and other office workers can rest for a few minutes during the midday luncheon period, a place where grass and trees and flowers can be planted to relieve the man-made drabness of brick, stone and cement.

Pittsburgh is about the only large city that does not have a public square of some kind in its business district.

The chamber suggests that the park, if created, could be made a Washington memorial, commemorating the bicentennial. Another good idea.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 3. — The 1932 version of the Broadway playboy is far from the model the street knew in other days. Usually he was a pink-cheeked young wastrel, an ensemble of engaging qualities along with contradictions, having a fling as a prelude to settling down.

He spent lavishly and gave extravagant midnight parties to chorus beauties in his bachelor apartment. He breakfasted on an aspirin and cigaret around 4 p. m. But many playboys of this school, turned from the frivols of life, married and lived happily ever afterward.

But the playboy of the moment is pretty much the sap. Broadway welcomes him and in the Broadway manner chuckles behind his back. One, with preternaturally bright eyes like a madman, sends a bunch of orchids to each member of the chorus on opening nights.

He also gives elaborate parties at which he reads faked telegrams, tinged with intimacies, from Mayor Walker, Otto Kahn, Mussolini and other dazzling figures of the headlines. These give the impression he is quite a fellow and attuned to celebrity contacts.

Still another is a porcine fellow who always squires a group of four or five girls to a cafe or de luxe speakeasy. He is a bellowing oaf who treats them as so much chattel in public and seems to get much sadistic pleasure out of such abuse.

But he bestows handsome gifts. And ladies must live. At a certain stage of such parties he usually grows boisterously potted and scatters large-sized bills to head waiters and members of the orchestra. As a windup he falls into heavy sleep. The girls tip toe away and call it a night.

Broadway, so spurious itself, has a way of recognizing the real thing in playboys. The four-flusher may seem to receive royal welcome, but he is merely tolerated. The gleaners, of course, accept his gratuities, but with a decided curl of the lip.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Think about machines. They are one of the things that ail us.

Even if we could wipe away every other problem of our present economic situation, we would still have to deal with machines; we would still have to decide what we are going to do about machines.

I heard of a new machine the other day. It is an amazing thing. It does the work which 68 men did before — and is run by one cripple. I am glad the cripple has a chance to run that machine, but I am thinking of those other 67 men who are now out of work, who are cold and hungry and desperate, because a thing of steel and iron has taken the meaning out of their lives.

"But machines are wonderful!" you say. "They're a proof of what miraculous things the human mind can do. They're a sign of progress. You can't turn the wheels of progress back. You can't force humanity to go back to the old days of hand-made things, even if machines do put some men out of jobs."

Ghandi has an answer to that. Remember, Ghandi isn't just a funny little person in a loin cloth. Ghandi is a profound thinker, educated in Oxford, who knows far better than you and I what our modern world is all about. And Ghandi doesn't think much of machines.

He agrees they are marvelous, and that they are a proof of the amazing things which the human mind can do; but he does not think that all the amazing things which the human mind does are necessarily GOOD THINGS, OR TO BE TOLERATED.

Ghandi doesn't believe that machines are good things. He says that, no matter how ingenious machines may be, they do not in the long run help human life. Instead, they hurt human life. They put more and more people out of jobs. They take away the worker's pride in his craft. They make rich people soft and greedy and heartless. They make poor people listless and stupid and hopeless.

And it is all nonsense, says Ghandi, to believe that we must go on using machines just because we have been able to make machines. We do not all take poison gas just because we have been able to invent poison gas. Machines are like the fabulous Frankenstein monster which destroyed its maker. Machines, uncontrolled, will destroy men. They are always destroying men.

Machines are not inevitable. The human race existed for a long time and did many remarkable things before machines came along. During that time men devised various forms of civilization. Some were found to be good; some bad. When a form of civilization proved to be bad, it was discarded. And now we have this amazing machine civilization, which seems to have us all in its grip. But it, too, can be discarded, and it must be discarded, or fiercely controlled, or it will ruin men.

That is what Ghandi says to his people. That is why he tells them to spin and weave their own cotton cloth on old-fashioned hand wheels and looms. He is not "just a religious nut." He is a student of human life and of the things that are good or bad for human life. He thinks that machines, uncontrolled, are bad for human life. He is defying not only England. He is defying machines.

Think about these things. When the business situation has improved, we will still have machines with us. We will have more and more machines, putting people out of jobs, making rich people soft and greedy and heartless, and making poor people listless, stupid and hopeless.

Jahncke, Hurley and Seabury

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The New York Evening Post, a robust partisan Republican paper, has already had a surfeit of one member of the Administration of Undertakers. It says:

"If the Ohio speech of Jahncke is a sample of what we are going to get in the coming campaign, may heaven have mercy upon us. For tactlessness, for partisanship, for sheer unfairness it can hardly be matched. Is it possible to match the brutal attack of chivalry shown in hauling Woodrow Wilson out of his grave in order to blame all our present troubles 'upon his administration?' Mr. Hoover would do well to call Mr. Jahncke off the stump."

But Mr. Jahncke is not the first of the Administration of Undertakers to deserve the rebuke. As far back as the first of January, at a meeting of the Republican National Committee in Washington, Secretary Hurley conceived and played upon the bright notion which the less clever Jahncke used in Ohio. And a mysterious "Mr. Pell," speaking to women in New York, smugly assured them that all our troubles are due to the wickedness of Mr. McAdoo, which 12 years of the undisputed sway of Mr. Mellon could not undo.

Republicans Angry Over Dry Trickery

Indeed, Secretary Hurley appears to be the worst offender of the lot. He was the inspiration of Mr. Jahncke's masterpiece which the Post appears to think is carved from cheese. And now he sallies forth again; presumably at the instance of the President, to denounce the Democratic chairman for giving voice to the common whispering around New York that Mr. Hoover is prepared to propose a referendum on prohibition—if it will do any good in the wet states of the East. Indignation? The indignation of Mr. Hurley cannot approach that of the wet Republicans in New York who were assured in 1928 through the subterranean channels of trickery that Mr. Hoover's election would mean the end of prohibition. It was part of the strategy of that noble campaign—wet in New York and Jersey; dry in dry territory.

But Secretary Hurley is not content with denouncing this latest story—he implies that the Democratic National Committee is responsible for the publications "slandering and misrepresenting the President of the United States." He knows that is not true.

Has Proper Redress From Published Attacks

It is presumed that he refers to the book, "The Strange Career of Mr. Hoover under Two Flags," which has had a large circulation, and the later book, just out, by Mr. Liggett, formerly co-editor of Plain Talk, "The Rise of Herbert Hoover."

These books do not deal with Mr. Hoover's presidential career. They are confined to his 20 years in Europe and deal with his business career there. They contain charges so grave that if they cannot be substantiated by proper evidence in court, the President has a clear case of criminal libel. It is inconceivable that Theodore Roosevelt would have hesitated a second in taking summary action through the courts. Few private businessmen of standing would permit the circulation of a book attacking their methods and activities unless court action would fail to prove a libel.

If these books are causing any concern to the Administration of Undertakers, it would be more dignified and impressive to adopt this method than to whine that the Democratic organization has anything to do with their publication; especially when the men who throw out the insinuation do not believe it.

Republican Speakers Disgust G. O. P. Paper

Perhaps the advice of Speaker Garner to the President would be worth taking. He proposes that the President call in his crooners and speakers of the Cabinet home to their neglected business, where there is more than enough to keep them occupied.

It is good advice, since the condition of the country is too serious to justify members of the administration in neglecting their duties to make splenetic attacks upon the Democratic House which has been putting politics aside to enact legislation like the Glass-Steagall bill.

Seabury Speech Bid for Nomination!

The speech of Judge Samuel Seabury, the mainstay of the Republican Legislature at Albany in the investigation in New York City, is generally interpreted as the announcement of his candidacy for the presidential nomination. For more than a year gossip has had it that political and personal ambitions moved him, but few thought he could be seeking a Democratic nomination. The investigation itself is clearly part of Republican strategy. It was concocted in conference in Washington between Kingsland Macy and leaders in the Administration of Undertakers. It was made a party matter in Albany. It is predicated on the idea that every Democrat in New York in office, or prominent in the Democratic organization, which has kept the state Democratic for years, is a potential criminal. Republican leaders have not been molested. Their bank accounts have been sacrosanct. The methods employed have often been shocking. But recently Mr. Seabury was Herbert Hoover's guest at his table, and he made his speech in Cincinnati on the invitation of the son of Mr. Taft. The setting is not just right for the launching of a candidacy for the Democratic nomination. However, Judge Seabury is within his right, albeit nothing could be more absurd to the minds of Democrats.

Attack on Roosevelt Shameless Procedure

The slur at Gov. Roosevelt fits in perfectly with the plans of the Washington conspirators. The Republican Legislature, of which Judge Seabury is a creature, has stubbornly refused to investigate specific charges of corruption and irregularities in Republican communities. That measures the common honesty of the whole proceeding. Then the Republican Legislature determined to investigate Gov. Roosevelt. Many decent minded Americans will be shocked to learn that it made a special point of having this "investigation" conducted solely by Republican members. A more shameless proclamation of partisan purpose could hardly be conceived. Just at this juncture the Republican Legislature's man goes to Cincinnati and makes an attack on Roosevelt. And the attack was unjust and silly. It seems to be part of the Republican game. But the Cincinnati performance was so undignified and improper, in view of Seabury's alleged position, that the New York Herald-Tribune, Republican organ expresses the hope he will not repeat the offense.

Democrats to Name Democratic Candidate

But it is ridiculous to insist that Judge Seabury seeks a presidential nomination from the Democrats. He has contributed nothing to the cause. He has uttered not a word of criticism of the Hoover administration. He won't. When the Democrats make their nomination, it is to be assumed that they will nominate a robust Democrat who has been fighting the Republicans and for the Democrats and not one who has been fighting the Democrats hand in glove with the Republicans. Among the candidates in the field a proper choice can be made. It is not necessary, or even desirable, that the nominee shall have the approval of Kingsland Macy and Ogden Mills. Real Democrats will not hesitate long in making a choice between Seabury and Roosevelt.
